How to Make Rain
A Nine Billion Drop
Why Does the Farmer Wonder?
Easter With Indians

By Arthur Brisbane

THE LONG drouth puzzles meteorologists.

"Prolonged air stagnation" and a shrinkage in the polar ice cap are mentioned as possible causes by Mr. Marvin, head of the U. S. Weather Bureau.

Sooner or later men will know how to make rain fall, when they choose, as they know, now, how to make water freeze and how to harness lightning, using the lightning current to freeze water.

This writer is by profession no rainmaker or witch doctor, but ventures to repeat here a suggestion made in writing to the government years ago.

No drop of rain falls without a speck of microscopic dust at the center of the drop, the dust making condensation of vapor and precipitation possible.

Lack of atmospheric dust might account for a diminished rainfall, since dust must be present in every rain drop.

Why not send up dust, scattering it from airplanes, in their regular mail and passenger carrying errands. The propeller, or exhaust, or a special apparatus would scatter it.

Some material of a highly hydrophilous nature, attracting water, lime rock, or that much used new substance scattered on roads to collect atmospheric moisture, might answer the purpose, ground to finest powder.

Some process for making the dust very cold, liquid air, perhaps, or the new ice, might be useful, since water coming in contact with a cold surface condenses readily.

You have seen steam form solid frost on your cold hand.

When this was suggested to government experts, by the writer, long ago, it was said that no results worth while could be obtained, for nature operates in too vast a space.

But, why not try it?

It is known that heavy rains have fallen after great battles. That may have been accident, or it may have been due to powder dust from cannon and rifles, scattered in the air, and taken up by air currents.

If a copper wire can bring down lightning, dust of the right kind, scattered at very low temperature, might bring down rain.

Careful investigation shows that, because of unemployment, the wages earned by American workers in 1930 were nine thousand million dollars below the earnings of 1929.

Nine billions are a great many dollars, several times the value of the country's wheat and automobile output combined.

The American Federation of Labor figures the 1930 drop even higher, at ten billions.

That drop in wages, which means a drop in spending power and consequently in prosperity, is what ails us, and those that advise a cut in wages should remember it. Wages are already being cut, only too widely and energetically, although without public announcement as a rule.

Cut earnings lower by reductions publicly sanctioned and you will have real trouble.

The government sues Bethlehem Steel for eleven millions in excessive profits on war contracts. Experts testified for Bethlehem that it made only 21 per cent profit against 50 per cent profit made by United States Steel.

The gentle farmer will wonder why the price of his wheat was held down by law to $2.50 per bushel in war, while local corporations could gather in tens of millions.

The simple answer is that local corporations, well organized, are run by a few men that snuggle close up to the government. Farming is done by millions of scattered men, not well organized, that snuggle up to nobody, except once in four years to one or other political party that soon forgets them.

Yaqui Indians, in their villages, celebrate Easter in a way that whiter Christians criticize as barbarous.

The whiters contrast the rock sepulchre in each village, representing the tomb of Christ, three little girls in white representing angels, with the nearly naked Indian braves, their bodies streaked with paint, faces hideously masked, dancing and chanting before the altar candles.

Those whites should know that a mixture in religions is the rule.

Each new religion, in its turn, perpetuates the beliefs and customs of religions preceding it. Scores of religions before Christianity had their trinities, miraculous births, resurrections. Christianity, today, borrows costumes, insignia and titles from pagan religions and governments of long ago.

FOLEY WANTS GARRETT JURY LOCKED UP

Nearly two-score persons fled smoke from burning paint in the DeSilva Sign Co. on the third floor, while David Gerber, an employe, and John Hawkins, elevator operator, kept the flames down until the arrival of fire apparatus. The fire, which caused a damage of $1000, tied up traffic half an hour.

BILL FOR PENSIONS AT 65 KILLED

The House today killed the bill which would have brought persons of 65 years within the scope of the old age assistance law. The present minimum, 70 years, will stand for at least another 12 months. There was no debate and it was a voice vote. Gov. Ely had advocated reducing the minimum, but recently changed his mind for this year because of the difficulty of financing it.

Letter to Crossley Tells Him the Raccoon Coat Never Left Fall River

(By Staff Correspondent)

Fall River, April 6—Two new and mysterious angles were focused upon today by Rhode Island and Fall River authorities in the Verna Russell murder for which Elliott Hathaway of Fall River stands accused.

In announcing the new developments, Atty.-Gen. Joseph H. McLyman of Rhode Island declared he could not reveal their nature until later.

Other developments in the case today included:

1—Admission by Atty.-Gen. McLyman that he has received the report of Medical Examiner Charles V. Bryson on the autopsy.

2—Announcement by District Attorney Crossley that he has a letter, apparently written by a woman, throwing new light on Hathaway's missing raccoon coat.

3—Checking up at Hotel Dixie in New York to learn if Hathaway had a moustache when he registered at that hostelry.

'SPEED KING' WRECKED AT 100-MI. CLIP

Sir Malcolm Campbell's Auto Rod Breaks on Very Brink of Doom

Brooklands, Eng., April 6 (AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell, world's motor car speed king, looked death in the eye for a few seconds today while an almost unmanageable racing car carried him along the steeply banked tracks of Brooklands at 100 miles an hour.

Competing in a handicap event at the motor racing club program, Sir Malcolm was completing the first lap of a 12-mile race when the rod holding the front wheels in position broke. As spectators limp bank sides of the track gasped in fear, Campbell fought the careening car along its steeply banked track and other competitors roared past.

Then he brought it to a halt without mishap. If the car had gone off the track it would probably have meant death to him and many spectators.

Sir Malcolm was asked when he went to the United States last January to attempt to set a new automobile speed record, if he feared death might overtake him in one of his mad dashes long a track or the sands of Daytona Beach, Fla.

"I've seen it in front of me so many times," he said, "that I'm a fatalist. You never go before your time. If my time is up I'm ready to go. There is no use grousing."

GIRL RIDES WITH DEATH

Miss Elinor Doherty, woman lawyer, of Cambridge, charged with drunkenness after her car killed the father of four children in Lawrence, says she gave the keys to one of two men who were with her so that he could drive the car. The driver did not stop at the scene of the accident, but was traced, and when found both of the men had disappeared. They are being sought by police.

JURY FIXERS TRAILED, FOLEY SAYS

Mayor Curley in Surprise Visit to Council Meeting Supervises the Jury Drawing

Revelation that jury fixers were kept under surveillance during the trial of Oliver B. Garrett, was made today by Dist. Atty. Foley in replying to charges of three jurors who held out for acquittal.

His statement was followed by the unexpected appearance of Mayor Curley before the City Council, where he presided over the drawing of names of jurors for the May term of court.

The district attorney said that if the three jurors were watched by detectives, as claimed, they must have been in close proximity to Jury Room at the time.

CURLEY WATCHES DRAW

The appearance of Mayor Curley at the City Council meeting caused a sensation, the council having been notified of his intention only a few minutes previously.

Accompanied by City Messenger Edward Leary, he entered the chamber and approached President Joseph McGrath, who rapped for order.

The mayor then mounted the rostrum, and announced: "We will now draw 31 traverse jurors for the first session."

He designated City Councillor Israel Ruby of Dorchester to draw the names, each of which the mayor scrutinized carefully. When the entire 236 were drawn he left the chamber and went to his office.

City Councillor Clement A. Norton, of Hyde Park, then announced he was responsible for Mayor Curley's presence.

FOLEY RECEIVES LETTER

"I told a friend of the mayor's at midnight last night," he said, "that I would demand such action today and apparently the mayor was informed of it.

"This is the third Garrett trial. It starts right here today in this Council Chamber. My purpose in suggesting such action was to show the people of Boston that the jury box is not tampered with and so I favored the appearance of His Honor today.

The district attorney's statement was in reply to a letter by three of the four jurors who held out for acquittal, in which they charged that jurors were "shadowed" and that individual members were prejudiced.

"I received today in the mail" said the district attorney, "a carbon copy of a purported explanation from three jurors of their actions in the Garrett case. It being a carbon copy I am unable to tell in what office or by what lawyer it was prepared.

"The government did every-

The Jews were proceeding quietly, it was reported here, when suddenly a heavy fire was opened at them from both sides of the road.

Jerusalem was like an armed camp over Easter, with machine guns placed about the city and armored cars patrolling the streets because of expected riots between Mufti and anti-Mufti forces during a procession of 2000 Moslems. The parade, however, was concluded without any disorder.

WOMAN LAWYER HELD IN DEATH

Arrest of a pretty woman attorney of Cambridge in a hit-and-run death case, manslaughter charges against others and a warning of Capt. George A. Parker, registrar, that the "spring death" season is here, today followed Easter traffic that claimed six lives in New England.

The Cambridge woman, Miss Elinor Doherty of Prescott st., pleaded guilty in Lawrence court to drunkenness, allowing an unfit person to operate her automobile and allowing a person to operate while under the influence of liquor.

Capt. Parker, commenting on the Sunday fatalities, said accidents due to drink have doubled in the past year and, combined with "a hysteria of speed," has taken the country by storm.

"The increase is not due, however, to an increase in drunken driving, but rather to an increased vigilance on the part of police in determining the exact cause," he said.

"As usual, high speed was the main factor in these accidents, and in some cases superinduced by intoxicating liquor.

"Every one of these parties started out pleasure bent, little realizing that their dead bodies would soon be strewn along the highway.

"Let these accidents serve as

MRS. HOOVER AND 10,000 ROLL 'EM WHILE THE SKIES WEEP

RAIN FAILS TO SPOIL EASTER EGG PARTY

Grandchildren of the President Have Gay Time, and Small Boys Grow Quite Rich

Washington, April 6 (AP)—Despite a thin cold drizzle, hundreds of children went to the White House today to take part in the traditional Easter Monday egg roll.

The only result of the rain, however, was to add variegated umbrellas to the scene. Several hundred children, from babies in go-carts to 10-year-olds were waiting when the iron gates swung open at 9 o'clock.

Massed in the East room, about 200 children of government officials crowded to the windows overlooking the broad south grounds. They had been invited by Mrs. Hoover to join her three grandchildren, Peggy Ann, Herbert Hoover 3d and Joan.

At 10 o'clock the program which Mrs. Hoover planned began. The blue and red uniformed Marine band swung into the south grounds, marched to a raised platform and struck up a folk song. A group of about 30 girls moved into a space off rectangle and began a folk dance.

GROWN-UPS BARRED

Knolls along the edges of the grounds were the most popular points. There scores tossed their eggs into midair and rolled them down to shrieking playmates.

Gaily colored baskets swung from the children's arms. Grown-ups, admitted only if accompanied by a child, spread blankets on the grass and assisted in games.

To meet any emergency, an ambulance drew up within the grounds. A "lost and found" white tent stood at the extreme south edge, with Boy Scouts on duty.

The first casualty was Sam Jackson, 10, Muskegon, Mich., who broke his arm when he fell from a portico.

Twice during the morning Mrs. Hoover and the two elder grandchildren gave personal greeting to the egg rollers. Guards estimated 20,000 had arrived at 11 a. m.

The First Lady stood on the south portico, waving and smiling, while Peggy Ann and Herbert, 3d, contemplated the scene soberly, then smiled and waved.

BOYS REAP HARVEST

At their second appearance on the portico, Mrs. Hoover bowed in return to shouts of greeting.

"Oh, look at this old rain," she said looking up. "We had hoped there would be lots of sunshine."

An aide lifted Peggy Ann and Herbert, 3rd, to a stool in front of her, directly behind the portico railing. Both children wore bright blue woolen coats.

Small boys did the usual brisk business of escorting adults into the grounds for a nickel or a quarter. Scores of them a half block from the gates, made their arrangements with grown ups, sauntered in, went out through another gate, and returned to their business stand to repeat the process. Unless accompanied by children, grownups were not admissible.

DARROW IS GLAD N. Y. IS 'WET'

New York, April 6 (INS)—Clarence Darrow is glad to observe New Yorkers do not observe the prohibition laws, he said in a speech to the First Humanist Society here.

"Before we can solve the problem of crime we must know the difference between right and wrong," he said. "What I say is right will be wrong to another person.

"For example, in many cases it is right to kill. You can kill in defence of your home unless it is invaded by a prohibition agent, and then you get killed."

The famous criminal lawyer added that when he was a child he was told anybody could be President of the United States, and that for the last three terms he has "been of the opinion that perhaps this is true."

N. E. Packers Plea for Rebate Heard

New York, April 6 (INS)—With the testimony of four witnesses the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on the petition of Swift & Co., Chicago, and eight other New England and New Jersey packing companies for a $25,000 freight rebate was concluded today.

Examiner P. S. Peyser set May 20 for filing briefs, and his proposed report will probably be submitted to the commission several months later.

$1,000,000,000 in New Construction Work Since Dec. 1

Washington, April 6 (AP)—More than one billion dollars' worth of construction work has been contracted for since December 1 and reported to the President's emergency employment committee.

Chairman Woods of the committee announced today that reports of contracts received totalled $1,035,079,178. During the past week reports were received from 36 states and the District of Columbia covering 203 projects amounting to $56,897,333.

REBELS BATTLE IN MADEIRA

Lisbon, Portugal, April 6 (AP)—Fighting between rebel forces and loyalist troops has broken out in Madeira, it was reported here this afternoon.

The loyalist troops were said to be commanded by Capt. Cabecad, civil governor at Funchal, who was on a tour of inspection in the north of the island when the trouble broke and who thus escaped arrest by the rebels.

Capt. Cabecada was reported to be trying to recover Funchal by force of arms. Some casualties resulted from the fighting. Details were lacking, as the rebels have cut cable communication between Madeira and Portugal.

The Portuguese high commissioner in Madeira and other officials are in the hands of the rebels.

BATHTUB PARTY BOYS EXPELLED

Springfield, April 6—The two Springfield College students, who, a week ago, staged a week-end bathtub party in an apartment here with two girls, have been expelled, it was admitted today by Dean Frank N. Seerley of the college.

They are Irvin Jackson, 22, a sophomore, of Coatesville, Pa., and Eugene Seaver, 20, a freshman, of Kenosha, Wis.

A week ago police walked into an apartment, rented under Seaver's name, and there found one of the couples climbing out of a bathtub, and the other couple in the bedroom of the apartment.

Arraigned in court, the two youths were fined $100 each, while the girls, Miss Ruth Crafts, 19, a stenographer, of Taylor st., and Miss Leah Washburn, 19, a telephone operator, of Ardmore st., were placed on probation.

Tom Mix Figures in Circus "Monopoly"

Chicago, April 6 (AP)—A $1,040,000 damage suit charging that Sells-Floto Circus, Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey and affiliated concerns conspired to create a monopoly in the circus business was filed in U. S. District Court today on behalf of the Western Show Company, Zack T. Miller and the Miller Brothers 101 Ranch.

The bill of complaint charges the defendants "enticed" Tom Mix, movie actor, from the employ of the plaintiff to that of the Sells-Floto Circus at a weekly salary of $12,000.

NORMAN AND MELLON MEET

Washington, April 6 (AP)—Moniagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, conferred today with Eugene Meyer, Jr., governor of the Federal Reserve Board; Secretary Mellon and members of the board.

No official would discuss the nature of the conferences. Governor Norman attended the regular meeting of the board held in the federal reserve offices.

The attendance of Governor Norman was unannounced. Importance was attached to his presence because if he has met with the board on his previous visits the fact was not made public. Generally Secretary Mellon does not attend the sessions unless he is requested to do so, though he is chairman ex-officio of the board.

Governor Norman arrived in Washington over the week-end as guest of Rear Admiral Carl T. Grayson, retired. It had been said no particular importance was to be attached to his visit, but there was much speculation and suggestion that he would bring the situation in the silver-using countries of the world to the attention of government officials, and would discuss the world's gold supply with administration representatives.

The United States and France now control about 60 per cent of the world's gold, with nearly $5,000,000,000 of the amount held in this country.

HUGE INVESTING FRAUDS PLOT IS CHARGED

Boston Financiers Named in $25,000,000 Case Before Federal Court Master

Charges of conspiracy against directors of the Founders Securities Trust and the United Investment Assurance Trust, with a combined listing at $25,000,000, were disclosed today in federal court with the opening of a master's hearing on a bill in equity.

The bill, brought by Wood F. Edwin and Robert Axon of Kentucky, holders of large investments in the companies, seeks to place "personal liabilities on the directors on the grounds of conspiracy." Both concerns are in the hands of receivers.

BITTER FIGHT FORECAST

Directors and other respondents were named in the bill as Charles W. Kesger of Brookline, Stephen R. Richards of Needham, Stephen R. Casey of Cambridge, Ludwig Stoddard of Brookline, First National Bank of Boston, Commercials Urbians Trust and Elmer H. Bright & Co. of Cambridge.

The two companies maintain offices at 209 Washington st.

A bitter legal battle was forecast as the hearing opened before George R. Farnum, former assistant U. S. Attorney-General, sitting as master.

Stager, the first witness, was questioned at length on the formation of the companies and items totalling $300,000 that had been lent by them.

HIGH PAY ARRANGED

He testified he was to have received 5000 shares of the stock of one company for "services, experience and attention to the business." It was proposed later that he be paid $100 a week for services, with additional "bonuses" for experience and attention to business.

He cited another proposal whereby he was to have been given an option to buy for $1 each 10,000 shares of the stock with a par value of $25.

Damon E. Hall, who conducted the Garrett investigation last Spring for Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner, appeared for the petitioners and said that hundreds of witnesses would be called from many sections of the country.

CHARGES OF FRAUD

In the papers filed by Hall for the Axtons, charges of fraudulent balance sheets, loans without proper securities and similar transactions are listed.

The law firm of Choate, Hall & Stewart filed appearances for many of the respondents, and Powers & Hall appeared for Stoddard.

Charges and answers comprise hundreds of legal documents that point to a countrywide interest in the hearing.

Canadians to Probe Liquor Smuggling

Quebec, April 6 (AP)—The Canadian government, it was estimated today after a preliminary inquiry, is losing $1,000,000 a year in excise taxes on liquor through smuggling operations between Quebec and St. Pierre and Miquelon.

To determine the extent of the traffic, the Dominion Cabinet appointed Justice Gibson of the Supreme Court as a commissioner to make a formal investigation.

PRESIDENT OF NICARAGUA 'AFFRONTED'

An Encounter With U. S. Naval Officer in Quake Zone Is Under Inquiry

Managua, Nicaragua, April 6 (AP)—A searching inquiry was under way today into the shooting Saturday night of a marine corps sergeant and a subsequent dramatic contact between a naval surgeon officer and the President of Nicaragua.

The Marine Corps sergeant, W. H. Pigg, who also was a second lieutenant in the Nicaraguan National Guard, is understood to have become slightly demented as a consequence of the severe strain to which everyone here has been subjected since last Tuesday's quake.

In the course of a reprimand to members of the Guardia Nacional he was shot and killed, and was taken to a house nearby where President Moncado and members of his staff had established their residence. Intense excitement prevailed and feeling ran high.

FORCED WAY IN

Lieut.-Comdr. Wilson Hetfield, who at nearby Campo De Marte, has been in charge of the American surgical task which followed the earthquake, heard of the shooting, and understanding that a marine was wounded, rushed to the house.

He was stopped at the door by two Nicaraguan officials, supposed to be Anastacio Samoza, acting foreign minister, and Antonio Flores Vega, minister of public works.

Hetfield, worn almost to the breaking point by the tremendous strain of hundreds of operations and other relief work, demanded entrance and when it was refused forced his way into the house.

Inside he found the marine sergeant dead, instead of wounded, as he had expected. President Moncado appeared and in the excitement of the moment reminded the American naval officer that he was President of Nicaragua, a reminder to which Hetfield made what was understood to have been an undiplomatic answer.

LEAVES FOR CORINTO

Hetfield left for Corinto, seaport on the Pacific coast, by a special United States Marine Corps airplane at noon Sunday, leaving his surgical work in the hands of others.

Managua spent a sad Easter Sunday. The city's churches all were destroyed in Tuesday's quake but masses were said in several improvised chapels.

Move to Oust Public Utilities Commission

Hartford, Ct., April 6 (AP)—Ernest L. Averill, deputy attorney general, today announced the Attorney-General's office has virtually decided to start ouster proceedings against the public utilities commission for alleged general neglect of duty. A petition signed by one hundred electors was filed by Albert Levitt, former law professor, a year ago, requesting ouster proceedings.

Montreal, April 6 (AP)—A cable to the Gazette from Kingston, Jamaica, reported the marriage there last Tuesday of Commander J. K. L. Ross, famous turfman, to Miss Iris Dellaser, daughter of a Jamaican planter.

Commander Ross and his first wife, Ethel, were divorced a few weeks ago in Reno, where the first Mrs. Ross remained to be secretly married March 17 to Guy Murchie, Boston attorney. The latter also had just been divorced.

A million dollar trust fund which Commander Ross established for his first wife in 1918 was ordered turned over to its grantors last year by the New York Supreme court.

Tokatyan Makes It Full House of American

New York, April 6 (AP)—Armand Tokatyan, Metropolitan Opera tenor, tired of being the only foreigner in his own home, so today he made it a full house of Americans.

He was admitted to citizenship by Federal Judge Knox with Congressman Black as one of his sponsors.

"I do not propose to be the only foreigner in my own home," Tokatyan explained with a smile. "You see, I married an American girl and have two American children, which makes it three to one."

Wise-Cracks Gone, Walker to Fight

QUINN IS WITH RASKOB IN DRY LAW BATTLE

Mrs. Sullivan Yet Undecided How She Will Answer Prohibition Questionnaire

Edward W. Quinn, Democratic national committeeman and former mayor of Cambridge, went on record as flatly opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment, and declared he would so inform John J. Raskob.

This statement to the chairman of the national Democratic committee came in response to Raskob's announcement that he sought the attitude on prohibition of each of his associates on the national committee.

Mrs. Nellie Sullivan of Fall River, Massachusetts' other member of the committee, withheld a statement of her stand until she receives the letter from Raskob.

"I feel that a statement at this time would be premature," Mrs. Sullivan said today.

Ex-Mayor Quinn's declaration was unequivocally opposed to the prohibition amendment.

"I think the public's reaction to the farcical report of the Wickersham commission demonstrates public sentiment in unmistakable terms," he said.

"I have signified my opposition to the dry law repeatedly in the past ten years, and my answer to Mr. Raskob will reiterate my public stand."

QUIZZED ON PROHIBITION

While Mrs. Nellie Sullivan of Fall River, Democratic national committee woman, was undecided today how she would answer in Chairman Raskob's questionnaire on prohibition, Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge, national committeeman, had decided definitely that he was with Raskob against the dry law. (I. N. R.)

MAYOR BUSY ON ANSWER TO CHARGES

Walker Is to Curtail Engagements; Ready to Fight Accusations to a Finish

New York, April 6 (INS)—His sun-blistered face set in grim lines and studiously refraining from making any of his famous "wise cracks," Mayor James J. Walker reported for work at City Hall today after a 26-day vacation in California.

He promptly announced that he will begin at once to make his reply to the charges of misfeasance which were laid before the governor by the city affairs committee.

Mrs. James L. Walker, wife of the mayor, plans to leave Miami, Fla., within the next few days to be with her husband while he answers charges against his administration.

700 GREET MAYOR

Mayor Walker walked through a lane of 700 persons assembled in City Hall Plaza—most of them jobless men—and went without delay to his flower-bedecked office. Gone was his old geniality, his "good fellow" attitude. He brushed through the throng, nodding right and left in response to quips from the sidelines.

His first act upon entering his office was to submit an interview with "city hall men" only. Reporters representing the world-wide press associations and representatives of out-of-town newspapers were barred from the conference. The mayor was talking only to the little clique of city hall men, whom he knows so well. No explanation for this discrimination—a departure in Walker's policy—was made.

The dapper "Jimmy" refused to discuss reports that he contemplated an immediate shake-up of one or two departments of his administration. It is understood, however, that he does not.

TO CUT ENGAGEMENTS

One of the hot bits of news that was later given out was that the Mayor plans to curtail his social engagements in compliance with instructions from his physicians."

Mayor Walker was asked if he intended to employ legal counsel in preparing his defense to the charges leveled at him by Rev. John Haynes Holmes and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the city affairs committee.

The Mayor said:

"I'll prepare the reply myself. I will start on it today. The answer, however, will be done systematically and carefully."

WOMAN TRIES TO LEAP OFF SHIP

New York, April 6 (INS)—Grieving over the death of her husband, which occurred while they were in Rome, a passenger on the liner Roma attempted to hurl herself from the ship's upper deck at midnight Thursday, it was disclosed when the boat docked today.

The woman, Mrs. Lillian L. Dickinson, of Fitchburg, Mass., widow of Dr. Porter Stevens Dickinson, well-known psychiatrist, was met at the pier by a doctor and nurse. She had remained in her cabin, seriously ill.

A stewart, Celio Di Georgi, seized her as she was swinging herself over the rail.

In the party accompanying Mrs. Dickinson and the body of her husband home were her two children, Porter, 5, and Avis, 6, and a brother of the dead doctor, Arnold C. Dickinson and his wife.

4 MARINES HELD AS BANDITS

Portsmouth, N. H., April 6—Armed robbery of more than $5000 in gold from a merchant at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, whose daughter was in love with one of them, landed four marines in the naval prison here today.

They are Stanley Zalawski, 22, of Lackawanna, N. Y., sentenced to 13 years; Robert Holmes, 24, of Gallatin, Pa., 21 years; Ellis Dean, 23, Lamete, Ala., 11 years, and Solon Bullard, 21, of Winston-Salem, N. C., three years.

According to records that accompanied them, the merchant's daughter was in love with Zalawski and told him of the money, which was in the currency of a half-dozen nations.

While Dean watched outside, Zalawski and Holmer, masked and armed, held up the merchant and took the money. All four then fled to a neighboring island, where the Marine guard stationed there arrested them. Bullard played a minor role.

It was the first holdup of its kind in the islands in the memory of the inhabitants and caused great excitement. The sentences imposed by the court martial were slightly longer, but were reduced by the Navy Department.

Democratic Dry Leaders See Raskob Splitting the Ranks

Washington, April 6 (AP)—The letter from Chairman Raskob to members of the Democratic National Committee, seeking their views on his plan to modify the Eighteenth Amendment stirred up new opposition to his proposal today in party ranks.

Leaders of the dry wing of the party reasserted their belief that to make the prohibition issue paramount in 1932 would split the party and renewed their demands emphasizing economic issues.

Some of these leaders took the view Raskob's letter was an attempt to pledge the national committee ahead of its next meeting and it resulted in spurring them to greater efforts to block adoption of his proposals.

Senator Hull, Democrat, Tennessee, former chairman of the National Committee, said Raskob's effort to make prohibition a partisan and paramount issue would exclude serious or deliberate consideration of other issues for an indefinite number of years.

Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, said the plan was "plainly a proposal to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment."

Senator Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, an opponent of prohibition, said he could see no harm in Raskob's polling the committee but reiterated his opposition to discussion of policies by the National committee.

14 YEARS AGO U. S. MADE WAR

New York, April 6 (INS)—Fourteen years ago today the United States entered the World war.

There was no radio, but the nation knew it was coming and the signing of the war proclamation against Germany at 1:11 p. m. by President Woodrow Wilson was received quietly in American city and hamlet.

Ninety German merchant ships were immediately interned.

The stars and stripes flew from millions of windows and mastheads. Street hawkers did a rushing business with miniature flags for the lapel.

A man refused to stand when the national anthem was played in Rector's on Broadway and was nearly killed.

George M. Cohan began writing "Over There."

William Jennings Bryan, former Secretary of State and noted peace advocate, telegraphed the President from Albany, Ga., offering his war services.

From office, factory, farm and college boys began a trek to the nearest enlistment depot.

It's just a memory now, but the wounded veterans in government hospitals could tell you how it felt on April 6, 1917.

LAWYER FIGHTS COURT RULING

Worcester, April 6—Indications that George A. Bourgeois, Atlantic City attorney, will take to the Supreme Court his attempt to have thrown out the separate support petition of his wife, Mrs. Muriel M. Bourgeois of Northboro, were seen today when he filed a petition in probate court.

The petition requests Judge Frederick H. Chamberlain to make a report on the material facts on which he last week denied Bourgeoise' motion to have his wife's case dropped.

In the motion the husband claimed the local court had no jurisdiction, as Mrs. Bourgeois' petition should have been filed in New Jersey. He also charged irregularities in the entering of the separate support petition, and that he was not properly served.

Bourgeois has a divorce action pending in Trenton, N. J., in which he named Atty. Jay Clark, Jr., of Worcester, who is counsel for Mrs. Bourgeois.

Michigan Ballots on Electric Chair

Detroit, April 6 (AP)—The question of whether Michigan is to reestablish capital punishment for murder is being decided today by votes of the State. The State has not had the death penalty for any crime except treason for more than 80 years, and it has been a century since there was a legal execution.

NEW TRIAL IN GIRL MURDER

Valparaiso, Ind., April 6 (AP)—Virgil Kirkland was granted a new trial today for the murder of his Gary schoolgirl sweetheart, Arlene Draves, 18. Judge Crumpacker ruled evidence on the first count in the indictment, that of murder by striking the girl with his fist, was insufficient for conviction.

Kirkland's punishment had been fixed by the jury at life imprisonment. The court said there would have been "no question about it" if the jury had voted for conviction on the count charging while committing an attack.

The girl died after a drinking party on Nov. 29.

Four of Kirkland's companions of the liquor party are awaiting trial on charges of attacking the girl.

They failed, however, in attempts to open safes of the Auto Sales Co. in Liberty st. and the Tait Motor Co. in Main st.

a warning to others and by slowing down save their own lives and the lives of others."

In addition to the six deaths, scores of injuries were reported in the first heavy flow of traffic this spring.

The dead:

BOYD, Miss Frances Campbell, 23, of South Orange, N. J.

HAMEL, Frank, of Greenwood st., Lawrence.

ZANNI, Anthony, 35, of Eaton st., Reading.

BRADFORD, Mrs. Bertha M., 62, of Tremont st., Brockton.

WRIGHT, Fay A., of Long Island City, N. Y.

HENRY, Paul, 10, of Crest rd., Wellesley.

The automobile of Miss Doherty killed Frank Hamel, widower and father of four daughters, on Broadway, Lawrence.

In District Court she pleaded guilty to drunkenness and allowing a drunken person to operate her automobile. Police asked a continuance until April 16, and she was held in bonds of $450.

Capt. Michael A. Barry, prosecutor for the Lawrence police, told the court Miss Doherty furnished him the names of two men companions, but told him she could not remember to which one she gave the keys that he might drive.

The two men escaped after two youths chased the alleged death car and forced the driver to the side of the road. Miss Doherty was seated alone in the car when police arrived.

Edmund Bigelow, 30, later was arrested for the Lawrence police in a Pawtucket, R. I., hotel. A warrant charging manslaughter, driving under the influence of liquor, driving so as to endanger lives and leaving the scene of an accident was served on him by Inspectors Heffernan and Murphy of the Lawrence police and he was taken back to that city.

Erskine G. Gilbert, the Harvard student, himself in a serious condition at Cambridge Hospital, faced a technical charge of manslaughter and driving so as to endanger the public.

GIRL IS KILLED

According to police he was driving with Miss Frances Campbell Boyd of South Orange, N. J., and pretty member of New York's Junior League, when the car crashed into a tree at Broadway and Highland ave., Cambridge.

Miss Boyd was killed instantly and Gilbert was badly burned by flames that enveloped the car when the gasoline tank exploded.

The Henry boy died early today at Newton Hospital from injuries he received from an auto driven by Duncan S. Edmonds of Forest st., Wellesley, according to police.

Mrs. Bradford met death at Framingham when the car in which she was riding crashed with another.

Zanni was killed near Franklin, N. H., while he was returning to his Reading home with William W. Abell, 35, of Warrenton st., South End. Police said Abell told them that he was driving and had dozed at the wheel. The car overturned when it struck a rut.

Marlboro, West Barnstable and South Boston contributed the most serious accidents of the day, accounting for injuries to a dozen persons, most of whom required hospital treatment.

"We have forgiven Violet," said Mrs. Jolley. "My husband has dropped the annulment proceedings in this matter. We have received several letters from Hollywood, where they are, and my daughter writes that they are supremely happy and have had a wonderful time since going to California."

At the time the couple eloped in February, the girl's grandfather, Ernest W. Tinkham, disinherited her. He is said to be a millionaire.

London, April 6 (AP)—Inconvenienced by a slight cold, King George is remaining in the royal apartments at Windsor for the present in order to minimize the chance of complications during one of the nastiest Easter seasons England has known in years.

His physicians decided not to issue a bulletin regarding his condition. He is attended by one of the nurses who was with him during his serious illness two years ago.

King George remained up and about most of Easter Sunday, but did not attend the service in the castle chapel, which would have involved a walk through the drafty unheated corridors.

The bombing followed warfare between the grocer and racketeers who had badgered him with demands for "protection money."

The explosion wrecked the store, but tenants in the rooms above suffered most.

Charles De Prena, his wife and three daughters fled into the corridor only to find escape cut off. The bodies of Mary, 11, and Lillian, 9, were found later on the second floor landing. The mother and the youngest daughter, Antoinette, 5, were severely burned.

Joseph Rebella, 80, was found unconscious in the back yard, badly burned. When escape down the stairs was cut off he jumped from a window.

ESSO'S International Triumph is due to WHAT IT GIVES

An Esso service station at San Remo, Italy, on the Italian Riviera. From an actual photograph taken March 3, 1931. Already Esso pumps dot 20 foreign countries, and now they line American highways from Maine to Louisiana. Car-owners in France, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Poland, Malta, Tunisia, Algeria, Cuba, Porto Rico, Nassau, B. I., Martinique, Guatemala, and British Honduras, as well as in the United States, choose Esso when they want the best.

A Radical Advance in Engine Power

Note how far superior to all other premium fuels Esso's knock-rating is. These results obtained with the Midgley Bouncing Pin Machine developed by General Motors and accepted and used by the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation. Esso will show the same superiority with any other testing system, even those ranking some fuels at "zero." Samples here picked at random from roadside pumps March 16, 1931, and tests made by the laboratories of the world's leading oil company—

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF NEW JERSEY

EVEN if you do not know what the inside of an engine looks like, you can appreciate such startling facts as these:

A certain well-known motor with "5-1 compression" can go from a standstill to 35 miles per hour in 13 seconds. Increase the compression ratio to "7-1" and the same motor makes it in 9 seconds. But only with the proper fuel!

Esso was developed to enable you to get all this added power out of your car. In many of the modern high-compression motors, it lets you get as much as 20% more power than is possible with any of the ordinary gasolines.

Regardless, however, of the type of your motor—regardless of whether your car is old or new—you will get instant and better driving results with Esso.

The diagram shown at the left helps explain why. Note that Esso is compared, not with regular gasoline, but with the finest premium fuels at present on the market.

Esso was perfected by the world's leading oil company. Its success was instantaneous. Already its use has spread to twenty foreign countries as well as from Maine to Louisiana. Start your ten-day test today. We predict you'll never go back! THE COLONIAL BEACON OIL COMPANY, INC.

GET THESE ADVANTAGES IN YOUR CAR

● NEW SENSATIONAL POWER. Even before Ethyl fluid is added, Esso is refined to a point reached by no other fuel. Result: up to 20% more power in new high-compression engines; better driving results in any motor.

● QUICKER STARTING. Quick starting depends upon the amount of gasoline vaporized at the low temperatures. Tests at the 158° point show approximately 20% greater vaporization with Esso than with the average of the 11 other leading premium fuels.

● SAVES YOUR MOTOR. Every time your engine knocks (even though you do not hear it!) you do more than lose power. You get the hardest kind of engine wear. Esso saves your motor by giving the lowest of all knock-ratings.

● NO CRANKCASE DILUTION. When gasoline is not completely vaporized, it seeps into the crankcase, diluting lubricants. Esso's "final boiling point" or "end point" is equaled by only two other Ethyl motor fuels. This means that it completely vaporizes at temperatures at which most other fuels are still partly liquid.

● COSTS NO MORE PER MILE. Esso, per gallon, costs slightly more than ordinary non-Ethyl fuels. But most former users of these fuels report that Esso gives greater mileage, and with its reduction of repair expenses, costs no more per mile in a year's running.

FOLEY RECEIVES PROTEST OF JURY TRIO

thing in its power to prevent any interference with the jury. Every person who has ever been charged with jury fixing and every person ever even remotely suspected of that practice in our county, was watched during the progress of the trial.

"These three jurors state that detectives were watching them. If that is a fact they must at that very moment have been in close proximity to jury fixers and thus came in the line of vision of detectives. No detectives trailed jurors.

"That the government should use every legitimate means in its command to protect jurors and to thwart the efforts of fixers, I believe no honest juror will question."

Dist.-Atty. Foley said his probe of alleged irregularities in the deliberations of the jurors was still going on, together with preparations for a third trial for Garrett, Mrs. Garrett and Lillian V. Hatch.

The jurors who signed the letter are William J. Dooley of 101 Kimball ave., Revere; Frank A. Norton of 8A Dana ave., Hyde Park, and Alexander Sutherland of 11 Mt. Pleasant rd., Hyde Park.

The statement maintains that individual jurors displayed "malice, stupidity and prejudice" and two in particular "ugliness and temper" during the deliberations. Specific charges were also made concerning statements of several members of the panel.

The letter ends by stating the writers would not wish to be tried in Suffolk County should they be accused of a crime.

The writers stated they voted for acquittal because they did not believe government witnesses. They added they had understood their deliberations were to be secret and that they need fear no comment or questioning on their decision.

JURY FOREMAN PRAISED

According to the letter, the vote on Mrs. Garrett at first was 8 to 4 for acquittal, shifting later to 8 to 6, where it remained. On Miss Hatch it was 7 to 5 to acquit, then 7 to 5 to convict, and finally 6 to 6, where it remained. The vote on Garrett was 7 to 5 to convict throughout, except for one ballot. This ballot was 8 to 4 for conviction.

The writers denied they had refused to look at exhibits and charged in turn the others had refused to compare the handwriting exhibits. They complimented the foreman, Frederick J. Steeves, and said he had conducted himself properly throughout the deliberations.

PASTOR-SLAYER PRAYS TO DIE

Nevada, Mo., April 6 (AP)—The reunited congregation of a little log church at Hailey's Bluffs mourned today as a coroner's jury investigated the fatal shooting of the Rev. George Rider, Kansas City evangelist, at the home of his former pastor, the Rev. J. A. Brown.

The evangelist, 43, died Easter day praying for forgiveness for Brown, 67.

"I wish I was dead, too," the prisoner said in jail.

Webster Hallett, prosecuting attorney, said the motive for the shooting hinged on success of services Rider had conducted the last three weeks in the pulpit. Brown resigned last December. Sixteen persons were converted in a revival that restored harmony to the church.

Mr. Rider said he had sought to pay Mr. Brown a compliment in asking him to conduct Easter services. The former pastor refused.

TELLS ABOUT REPORT

The Rhode Island prosecutor, in his talk to newspapermen today, said he had not considered allowing any possible offer by the defense to have Hathaway plead guilty to second degree murder or manslaughter.

"No move has been made by the defense toward any such thing as that," he declared. With regard to the medical examiner's report, he said:

"I called at Dr. Bryant's house yesterday and received the autopsy report in person from him, but I do not care to make public its contents until I have received the report of Lester Rouse, state pathologist, as to the analysis of the organs.

"When the case comes up at Newport, Friday, I will ask for a continuance. Meanwhile, one of my men is today working with the Fall River police on a couple of phases of the case; on two points that I think are important to have checked up specially. I haven't seen anything done on these two points by the Massachusetts authorities, but I do not care to discuss their nature now.

CHECK UP IN NEW YORK

"Also I am now checking up in New York to find out whether Hathaway was clean shaven when he appeared at the Dixie Hotel. I have received a partial report over the telephone from my agents who are working in New York and expect to have a complete report later.

"The hotel employes there, I understand, remember Hathaway having been there."

With regard to the possible exhumation of Verna Russell's body, the Attorney-General declared:

"I think I will be passive and let the court decide whether the body shall be exhumed, if the defence requests it. I don't think the defense will want to have the body exhumed after seeing the detailed report of the medical examiner."

The mysterious letter received by District Attorney Crossley and, apparently, written by a woman, was postmarked at a town outside of Fall River and was delivered at his office Saturday. He turned it over to State Detectives Stokes and Ferrari.

The information contained in the letter indicated that the raccoon coat never left Fall River and was either hidden or destroyed there.

Crossley declined to reveal the exact information the letter contained except to state that search for the coat will be confined to this city. The letter was signed only with initials.

Meanwhile Massachusetts officials today continued their efforts to place the scene of the crime in this State.

Probably an early step will be questioning of Mrs. Clifford Munroe of 278 Belmont st., the next-door neighbor of Vernon Galvin.

According to her story) the car was parked there as late as 1 a. m. Tuesday morning, March 24, and had been there for at least an hour and a half. It is believed she can tell whether there was a body in the car at that time.

McLYMAN AT TIVERTON

At Providence, Atty.-Gen. McLyman is reported as unimpressed by Hathaway's story of a lapse of memory suffered after taking one drink on the murder night.

The attorney-general and his aids, Sigmund Fischer, visited Fall River and also the Tiverton lane, yesterday. They declined to comment on what their business was there.

It was revealed also that there will probably be another conference between McLyman and Dist.-Atty. Crossley, probably today or tomorrow. It is believed this conference will determine whether Hathaway will be questioned by Massachusetts authorities while he is a prisoner at the Rhode Island jail.

BISHOP ASKS JUSTICE

The latest story of Hathaway's actions on the murder night, as revealed by his attorney Saturday, has met with little credence in official circles. Rhode Island authorities treated lightly the story that the youth suffered from traumatic neurosis on the fatal night. Dist. Atty. Crossley had nothing to say on the matter and stated he would leave all comment to Atty.-Gen. McLyman.

Considerable stir was created here by the ringing denunciation of the murderer of the slain nurse by Bishop Cassidy. Although not mentioning the case by name it was evident he referred to the slaying of Verna Russell while the congregation had little difficulty in recognizing his allusion to the Borden murder case as a parallel.

The bishop said the murderer of the girl should be brought to justice speedily. The fact of where the crime was committed should be ascertained at once, he said, and then there should be no hesitation in preventing the murderer's escape into another state.

HOODOO BOBS UP TO MAR HONEYMOON

Haverhill, April 6 (AP)—A series of accidents which followed the wedding of Mrs. W. Scott Peters, widow of a former Essex County district attorney, to Mark T. Johnson of Waterboro, Me., caused the couple to dismiss plans for a honeymoon trip, friends of the bride learned today. Mrs. Johnson formerly resided in this city.

After the ceremony at Waterboro Saturday night the couple took a group of friends to see their newly completed home there. Electric lights had not been connected and an oil lamp was used. Mrs. Johnson, who was carrying the lamp, tripped and fell against Mrs. Mary Carpenter, mother of the bridesmaid, and both women tumbled down a flight of stairs. The lamp was broken and the burning oil set fire to a carpet.

Col. G. W. M. Bailey of Amesbury tripped as he attempted to extinguish the flames and fell on the broken lamp. An artery and two veins in his wrist were severed. Edward W. Peters, son of the bride and also of Amesbury, extinguished the fire, but his hands were badly burned.

Mrs. Carpenter's wrist was fractured and the bride was severely bruised. Col. Bailey was driven 20 miles to Sanford, Me., for medical attention.

SUNKEN SHIP'S CREW FREED

New London, Ct., April 6 (AP)—The captain and crew of the British oil screw vessel Symor, a rumrunner suspect, which sank Friday night after being rammed by the Coast Guard patrol boat Legare, were released today in custody of the British consul at New York. They were expected to leave today for Boston, where they will board a vessel for Nova Scotia, their home port.

The British consul accepted responsibility of assuring the departure from this country of the Symor's crew after being in telephone communication with the captain, Aubrey Beckman, of the vessel.

A Coast Guard board investigation today completed its inquiry into the accident. The testimony will not be revealed until it is reviewed by Capt. H. H. Wolf, commanding the Coast Guard destroyer force.

Ends Life in Canal

Lewiston, Me., April 6—The body of Dexter W. Sampson, 26, of Auburn was found in a mill canal.

600 WALK OUT IN FALL RIVER MILL STRIKE

Fall River, April 6—More than 600 workers of the Charlton mill went on strike today as a result of a 10 per cent decrease in wages of 100 weavers.

The order for all workers to remain away from the mill in sympathy with the weavers and in protest against the wage cut was given by the Textile Council.

Deputy Police Chief Abel J. Vicletta sent 11 policemen to the mill before opening time, but there was no disorder and those workers who came to the mill went away quietly again when they saw the Textile Council order was being obeyed.

At 10 a. m. today the weavers met in Weavers Hall in Second st. with leaders of the Council addressing them.

After the talks the weavers voted to await a possible conference between representatives of the weavers and of the mill.

About People You Know in Boston Stores

By FRANCES L. BAIRD

LARGE SUM FOUND

The finding of $50,000 in negotiable bonds and the prompt notification of a bank by Miss May McCann of the Lost and Found department of Filene's illustrates how the personal service bureaus of Boston stores were kept busy during the pre-Easter shopping rush.

The bonds were turned in to the personal service bureau, of which Miss Mabel Wessman is head, shortly after they were dropped by a man in the store.

The personal service bureaus have returned all sorts of articles which were lost by Easter shoppers.

MORE MONEY FOUND

An unusual bit of service was rendered by Miss Ann Barr, personal shopper in charge of the lost and found at Hovey's for a woman who reported the loss of a new five dollar bill in that store Saturday. After careful check of the customer's route through the store the bill was found where she probably pulled it from her purse with her handkerchief.

A live canary left in this store was never claimed.

WHO'S GOT THE BUTTON?

Probably the most effort with the least result was reported by Miss Beatrice McIntyre of Shepard's to whom an agitated woman appealed to find a plush button that she had lost off her coat in that store!

The button could not be matched in this country.

CHILDREN RESTORED

Children and parents, and husbands and wives are frequently reunited by the personal service bureaus in the stores.

A small boy, lost while hunting for the Easter bunny in R. H. White's, was restored to his worried mother by Miss Helen McCaffrey, who also has charge of the post office on the first floor.

GLASS EYE FOUND

Miss Mary Callahan was able to restore a glass eye, in a box, to a customer who had lost it while shopping in Jordan Marsh Co., en route to a hospital with it for a patient. It had been specially made and its loss meant a great deal to a patient. It was turned in seven hours after it had been reported lost and the customer was immediately notified by phone.

Purses, merchandise, pickles and cakes, dogs and dolls found are all described in a thick ledger kept by Miss Callahan.

PUPPY FOUND

One of the most exciting finds in Gulchrist's was a pup, left tied to a stool at the soda fountain counter some time ago, while its owner went about her shopping with an easy mind for three hours. Meanwhile, Miss Dora M. Rowe had transferred the little dog to the cellar awaiting the arrival of the Animal Rescue League. The owner recovered it at the League.

Two weeks after a customer left an old pair of pants at The Continental after purchasing a new suit, he returned from a journey to claim $800 left in the pockets. Thomas E. McCormick, served this man found the money and took him to the office to get it after he proved ownership.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

A store romance was revealed when Miss Elisabeth Coughlin of the children's shoe department at Shepard's announced her engagement to Francis Vigneau, member of Charles Hector's WNAC orchestra.

Miss Coughlin was given a kitchen shower by 35 friends before she left the store Saturday to prepare for her wedding on April 19. The shower was featured by a mock wedding in which Fred Godkin appeared as the "bride" and Edward Perrett as the "groom." Alfred La Jeunesse played the role of "cupid."

DIRECTORS NAMED

Directors for the Boston Better Business Bureau were nominated at the annual meeting of the nominating committee, held at a luncheon in the First National Bank.

This committee is composed of Charles F. Weed, president of the First National Bank Corp.; E. J. Frost, executive vice-president of Filene's; James Nowell of Lee Higginson Co., and Burnelle G. Hawkins, store manager of Jordan's.

STORE SNAPSHOTS

Clifton Wheeler, superintendent of A. Stowell & Co., getting out his fishing tackle for his annual trip to Nova Scotia. . . . Arthur Kelly, treasurer of R. H. White Co., trying out his new Auburn car. . . . and James V. Reardon, service superintendent of Shepard's, out in his new car also. . . . Herman Spain, manager of Ampico Hall, listening in for Lily Pons and recalling how she insisted on a certain piano in his store when she was in Boston. . . . Jean Shepard, Jr., instructor in J. H. Hunter's golf school, telling funny ones about beginners. . . . Harry Dolan, manager men's clothing at Boyle Bros., spending the holiday at Newton, N. H.

Gingerbread in Joy Form

Gingerbread men like these are a joy to children and adults alike, and so easy to make when you use the recipe Martha Lee used in her class demonstration of gingerbread men two weeks ago, and which is printed below.

The little men in the picture look so lifelike it doesn't take much imagination to have them hopping right off the pan and starting to clown all over the kitchen table, but I think our Jean has them well trained, and they look quite docile! Don't you love the speckled and striped uniforms she has dressed them in?

Everybody loves these demure little fellows, so why not plan to make some soon for the children's lunch boxes, or for the next birthday party? You'll find this recipe easy to follow:

GINGERBREAD MEN

2¾ cups flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1-3 tsp. salt
1 tsp. ginger
2-3 cup molasses
1-3 cup brown sugar
1 egg
1-3 cup melted shortening

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and ginger together. Mix molasses, sugar, egg and shortening. Add the dry ingredients to make soft dough. Shape into gingerbread men by taking a small piece of dough, rolling with hands into a ball and place on greased cookie sheet for body. Flatten out into shape. For arms take another piece of dough one-half the size of the first and roll with hands into long, round strips. Place across top of body, pressing edges well together. Take a larger piece of dough than No. 2 and proceed in the same way to make legs. For the head take a small piece of dough, roll into ball, flatten and attach to the body at neck. Press edges together. Make eyes, nose and mouth with tops and stems of cloves, or with raisins and currants. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 15 minutes. Make hats and jackets of bright colored icing, put on when men are cool.

How Those Easter Dinner Leftovers Can Be Used

If you had that baked ham or smoked shoulder that we were talking about for your Easter dinner, you probably have quite a little of the cold meat left over. The question before the house this morning is what to do with it.

Of course there is always a possibility of a ham omelet, ham croquettes, macaroni au gratin with ham, western sandwiches (beaten egg, diced onion and minced ham) and hot fried ham sandwiches, not forgetting the lucious pea soup that has a ham bone for its foundation.

But what I can do right here and now is to give you a recipe for a Dutch loaf and a shoulder salad, either of which you'll find delicious for serving for a bridge supper or luncheon and which will make quite a dent in the leftovers.

DUTCH LOAF

2 cups minced, cooked ham or shoulder.
1 small onion.
2 eggs.
2 Sprigs parsley.
1 cup milk.
1 tbsp. prepared mustard.
2 hard-cooked eggs.
½ tsp. pepper.
½ cup cracker crumbs.

Put meat, onion and parsley through the food chopper. Add the eggs beaten, the cracker crumbs, pepper, mustard and milk. Pack in in a well-greased baking pan; bake in a medium oven (400 deg. F.) for 40 minutes.

SHOULDER SALAD

2 cups diced, cooked smoked shoulder.
1 cup diced dill pickles.
½ cup French dressing.
Mayonnaise.
Whole tomatoes.

Combine shoulder and diced pickles, pour over French dressing and marinate well. Add little mayonnaise—enough to make ingredients adhere to each other. Fill tomato cups with the mixture and serve with mayonnaise on crisp lettuce leaves. In making the salad all the ingredients should be well chilled.

RUSSELL NOBLE THRIVING ON JAIL FARE

Lawrence, April 6—Russell Noble, 27, held for the homicide murder of Mrs. Clara E. E. Ellis, Haverhill widow, is thriving on prison fare and treatment, it was revealed today.

Entering his sixth week of imprisonment, the youth's appetite is increasing and he is putting on weight on his jail routine of eating, sleeping and reading.

Noble was visited yesterday by his counsel, Attorney Richard J. McCormick, and by one of his brothers, James Noble, who brought tidings of the improvement of Charles Noble, recovering from an appendicitis operation.

Young Noble told them he had enjoyed his Easter dinner of ham and eggs, and also chapel services in the morning, when he joined in the singing.

Apparently the second and surprise visit of the alienists, Dr. L. Vernon Briggs, of Boston, and Dr. Clarence A. Benson, head of the Danvers State Hospital, did not bother young Noble.

Although Keeper Bunting had understood the visit would not be made until today, the two mental experts arrived at the jail late Saturday afternoon.

It is understood that future visits will also be made unexpectedly, and that at least four more are probable. The report will be turned over to Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Gregg, who requested the examinations, through agreement with Atty. McCormick.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

The last export shipment of New England apples, which have left the Port of Boston in greater quantities this year, was shipped yesterday on the Canard liner Andania.

Three thousand five hundred bags destined for Liverpool made up the apple cargo on the passenger liner.

Organizations interested in the promotion of the port have worked hard for the success of the apple export trade from this port.

Honor students from Tabor Academy in Marion, Mass., who annually as a reward for high scholarship are taken on a vagabond cruise on one of the United Fruit Co. white steamers, returned here after completing the trip on the Sen Cli. PROTHERO RETIRES

After 42 years' service with the Canard Line, in which he became well known, in the Boston section, Capt. William Prothero will retire after he brings the Acquitania back from Liverpool to New York, he announced, shortly before he left this port in the Canard liner Andania yesterday. He has been serving as relief captain.

GINGER FLAVOR

In anticipation of a big ginger ale market, ginger flavor started to come into Boston on the Amerford steamship Bellflower which docked here from Manchester and Liverpool. The ship brought 30 cases and 95 casks of flavoring. Other cargo carried by the Bellflower was walrus hides, wool and alpaca fleece.

Old Stuff

(Rambling memories of Boisterous Boston of another day awakened by reminiscent talks with George Holland, former Boston newspaperman, who is to town heralding the advent of Bob Newman's new play, "The Patch.")

DO YOU RECOLLECT THE DAYS when the three most popular spots for college boys to gather were Dan McGrath's Nip on Tremont st., Parker Shannon's De Friest's on Avery st. and the Bromfield Inn . . . with Pop Kinney guarding the back room at the Nip so colorfully that the late Tex Rickard, his famous "See what the boys in the back room will have" from Pete's immortality became? . . . And the pontifex! John Donovan mortalized as he mixed side cars at De Friest's . . . and Judge Peck ceased the boys out of their monthly allowances at the Inn by pretending to be drunker than they were.

Now must we forget Frank Locke's in the Alley . . . the gathering place of the femme-takers-of-the-days when gamelas were still flowers . . . And the famous fight in Locke's between two of the queens when laymen went into mysteries and no wonder . . . The fight consisted of fourteen rounds for five minutes . . . Then one of the blows landed and the fight ended with the principals in tears, "The brute, she struck me!"

IT WAS TO BE expected that Edgar Wallace, who writes thrillers for jaded playgoers, would turn his attention upon Chicago's gangland. And so, with "On the Spot" at the Wilbur he has done that very thing and made an engaging play of it. While the subject has broad possibilities, Mr. Wallace has treated it lightly, running more to the love affairs of his principal character than to racketeering exploits. You were not to be denied one bit of gun play, however, and out of this came as fancy a murder as you may ever expect to witness in detail.

EXCEPT FOR the abrupt removal of a few dangerous rivals in underworld trade, "On the Spot" sped through its scenes in the easy manner of any well ordered play. It was just good, swift drama smoothly told and not nearly as rough in its text as might be implied from its title. Nor does its action put you very much on edge. High up in his luxurious apartment overlooking Michigan ave. in Chicago, Tony Perelli gave most of his time to women and to music. He was a ruthless lover. You could sense trouble when Tony laid plans for discarding his pretty Chinese mistress for the wife of one of his henchmen. It was easy to suppose the objectionable husband, too, up in his luxurious apartment overlooking Michigan ave. in Chicago. Tony Perelli gave most of his time to women and to music. ment overlooking Michigan ave. in Chicago. Tony Perelli gave most of his time to women and to music. He was a ruthless lover. You could sense trouble when Tony laid plans for discarding his pretty Chinese mistress for the wife of one of his henchmen. It was easy to suppose the objectionable husband, too, the removal of little Miss Lee presented difficulties which in the end brought disaster on Tony's whole structure and landed him into the arms of the police.

MR. WALLACE unfolds his story without much flourish. These gunmen, it seems, are quiet and rather gentlemanly folk on the surface. For diversion, as an example, Tony runs restless fingers over the keyboard of an organ console strumming sonatas and weighing for his lady friends. He soothes his victims with soft music, while quietly plotting confusion for his enemies.

AN EXCELLENT cast gave fine authority to the performance. As the versatile Tony, Crane Wilbur set a fast pace for his companions in crime, but every player in the company was right at his heels. Anna May Wong, of considerable fame in picture circles, gave an indication of being new to the speaking stage and with Glenda Farrell, a blondish lady of rare loveliness, divided feminine honors. Other outstanding characterizations were turned in by John Butler, Clay Clement, Alan Ward and M. Kline, the latter representing the police and making a good job of it.

AS A THRILLER, "On the Spot" will hardly go into the records with high rank; as a drama presenting a phase of American city life it measures up to every expectation. Its characterizations are interesting from every point and are flawlessly presented. While there are few harrowing episodes, the narrative holds you to strict attention—really demands it.

CHEVALIER AT BEST IN FILM

That stellar comedian, Maurice Chevalier, is at his best in "Le Petit Cafe," which is now the feature at the Fine Arts. M. Chevalier's wife, Yvonne Vallee, is seen with him, and she too is splendid, the pair, together with better dialogue and music, making this French version of the star's "Playboy of Paris" far superior to its English original. The popularity of M. Chevalier should make the picture the best at the box office that the Fine Arts has yet had.

The engaging Maurice has the role of a waiter in a Paris cafe who suddenly inherits a private fortune. A playboy by nights, a contract keeps him at his menial tasks during the day. The cafe owner's delightful daughter is the heroine of the romance, which involves a rival, a duel and a reconciliation before its happy conclusion.

Included in the cast are Tania Fedor of the Comedie Francaise, Andre Berley of the Parisian stage, Francois Rosay, George Davis, the comic, and Emil Chautard.

LEATRICE JOY TOPS STRONG BILL AT KEITH-BOSTON

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

THAT VERY VITAL LADY of lively beauty, Leatrice Joy, is come again, bringing a springtime of stage cheeriness. Headliner at the RKO Boston this week, Miss Joy once more distinguishes herself as a flesh-and-blood entertainer worthy of our memories of her glorious self and performance in the silent drama. Incidentally, she tops a sterling bill, excellently balanced and generally of much merit.

* * *

MISS JOY is so clever a performer that she deserves more space than do most movie stars when they appear in person among the lights of vaudeville. On her first round of the big time houses, she revealed herself a polished actress with marked versatility of talent. She sang, she danced, she pantomimed, her act was one of striking variety. Now she confines herself to one specialty, for the most part; her chief distinctive lying in her character impersonations. Herein, for the less confident and less capable would lie danger; for there would be obvious comparison to Ruth Draper and Cornelia Otis Skinner. But Miss Joy, knowing her gifts, strikes boldly out, and fairly amazes us that she can do all her bits so well, and that we had not suspected so much was in her. For she easily and naturally changes from one character to another, is convincing, and withal most fascinating. Little wonder then that each time she brings down the house and wins what is no less than a sincerely accorded ovation.

Leatrice Joy

THE ENTIRE STAGE section of the bill is good, the singers, the dancers, the comics, and the what-not. There is Larry Rich acting as master of ceremonies for everybody and introducing the features of his revue; and there is Phil Rich, superb character actor, and very funny. For artistic worth, the living jewels deserve great praise; in brief, the bill is a classy one.

ON THE SCREEN, Richard Barthelmess is the star of "The Lash." It is the kind of role this actor's admirers love to see him portray; it has romance and dash. The photoplay is supposed to tell the story of early Southern California, of the clash between native "greaser" and invading "gringo"; but its cinematic value is chiefly scenic, and in the action play of the cameras. It ranks among the good "Westerns," and adds nothing new to the screen in plot or treatment. The best actors are Robert Edeson and Fred Kohler. Mary Astor shows continuing improvement.

Those expecting to see Barthelmess at his best will be disappointed. But that stage show more than makes up for any shortcomings in the movie. It's a classy vaudeville bill, with Leatrice Joy as a bright and shining light that all should see and hear—and admire.

MERIVALE AT PLYMOUTH

By HARRIS MORGAN

DEATH AGAIN stalks the boards at the Plymouth. Meaning simply, of course, that the very able Philip Merivale, with a thoroughly competent cast, is here on a return engagement of "Death Takes a Holiday." This highly successful production of the Professional Players, which did very well indeed on its first visit, is scheduled to remain through this week only. It is a drama well worth seeing.

As playgoers will recall, this drama from the Italian of Alberto Casella deals with the appearance in the flesh of death in the person of a prince, the role of Mr. Merivale. He plunges into the intimate life of an aristocratic circle.

There are a few changes in the cast among them, Ralph Locke taking the place of Julian Royce as the Duke, and Viva Birkell replacing Irby Marshall as the Princess.

All the performers play with skill. Mr. Merivale, a magnificent artist, turns in a masterly job; and it is due in greater part to his endeavors that the unreal becomes seeming realism.

Miss Vinson is still excellent as Grazia, and Mr. Erskine still superb as the Baron.

WALLACE TALE AT THE PARK

The Park feature is, "Should a Doctor Tell?" The dialogue was written by the well known Edgar Wallace, it was produced under the direction of Manning Haynes, and the acting is by a carefully selected cast headed by Norah Baring and Basil Gill.

The second feature is a drama of the Far East, starring Fern Andra. Also there is Chapter Six of the secret service thriller, "Finger Prints."

BUSTER COLLIER IN CAST OF "STREET SCENE"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, April 6—Very smart of Samuel Goldwyn to select Buster Collier for the role of the boy opposite Nancy Carroll in "Street Scene." Buster is not only the type but he is a mighty good actor as well and all he has ever needed is the right opportunity.

Watch Buster's stock rise after he plays the part of the Jewish youth, a dreamer who loves the Irish girl. What with King Vidor directing him in "Street Scene," well, I prophesy he will be in great demand this coming year. United Artists must think so for they have taken a five year option on him. Mr. Goldwyn unusually has the knack of building up players. Lily Damita, for instance, who was brought here from France by Mr. Goldwyn has just signed a new contract with United Artists. Before she comes to the U. A. lot she will make two pictures for Radio. Miss Damita's value is largely in her ability to speak French. She has been in many foreign versions.

I READ SOMEWHERE in one of the current magazines that William Powell stayed too closely to type in his Paramount pictures. The comment, I thought, was intelligent. Warner Brothers are not going to let Bill continue to be the suave crook-all his life. "Heat Wave" was originally purchased as his first but it has been put in the background and "Co-Respondent," an original by Gregory Simpkins, a story of the South Seas, will be Mr. Powell's first. Julian Marsh, who has played opposite John Barrymore in his last two pictures and who certainly is getting as good a break as any young woman I know, will play opposite Bill. Al Green will direct.

STONE LEADS IN CONCERT

By MOSES SMITH

MUSIC BY American composers filled the Easter day concert of the Handel and Haydn Society, led by Thompson Stone, at Symphony Hall. As a prelude to Horatio Parker's "Hora Novissima," the chorus sang "Exultate Deo," a jubilant composition by Mabel Daniels, Boston composer. Written two years ago for Radcliffe's 50th birthday, the work received its first public performance yesterday, with the composer on hand to receive the applause of the large audience.

Parker's composition, considered a masterpiece by competent critics when it was heard here almost 40 years ago, is evidently showing its age. For yesterday it sounded comparatively tame. It seemed made of saccharine "goodies" rather than of red meat. This is not to say that the music is ineffective or that it is not well written. On the contrary, it is remarkably well written, coming from an American in the nineties. But it lacks originality or even vitality. The best effective progression, viewed either harmonically or chorally, was an almost exact reproduction of the beginning of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

The performance was a good one, at times brilliant. Mr. Stone built up some notable climaxes with his chorus. The People's Symphony Orchestra played the instrumental parts efficiently. Especially commendable were the solos of Jeannette Vreeland, Kathryn Meisle, Dan Gridley and Nelson Eddy. It was a pleasure to hear them—the women's voices were notably beautiful—singing without stress or strain, at home in the music.

"JUNE MOON" TOPS BILL

"June Moon," with Jack Oakie in the lead, is the new feature at the Public Beacon and Modern. It is a film version of the play by the same name. It has comedy in abundance, heart-interest, and highly amusing character portrayals.

Oakie plays the role of the young song-writer from Schenectady who goes to New York to make a fortune in "Tin Pan Alley."

The co-feature, "The Hate Ship," is a thrilling melodrama of murder on the high seas. It is one of those unusual mysteries where murder is not suspected until the end.

Nine Acts on Bowdoin Square Vaudeville Bill

A gala bill is offered at the Bowdoin Square for Players' and Patrons' Jubilee Week." There are three big picture features coupled with nine acts of vaudeville. The films are "Stolen Jools," Douglas Fairbanks in "Reaching for the Moon," "The Boudoir Diplomat," with Betty Compson.

What $16,000 buys in The American Weekly

A full page in color nearly three times as big as any other magazine page in the world . . . 5,500,000 families at a cost of less than ⅓ cent per family . . . The attention of the entire family instead of a single buying factor.

THE surprising fact is not that The American Weekly carries so much food advertising, but that more food advertisers have not analyzed thoroughly its values.

To the owner of a trademarked food with national distribution, this great magazine offers economies not to be duplicated by any other magazine or group of magazines.

With almost double the circulation of its nearest competitor, The American Weekly gives national coverage at by far the lowest cost per family.

Every Sunday morning it reaches 5,500,000 homes at a cost of less than ⅓ cent per home for a full color page more than twice the size of any other national magazine page.

That means an opportunity for illustration, headline, copy, recipes and a coupon if you like.

And while these 5,500,000 American Weekly families are scattered throughout all forty-eight states, still this magazine concentrates and dominates in the richest markets.

In twenty-four states and the District of Columbia are located 74.5% of the grocery and delicatessen stores of the nation.

In these states more than 80% of all trademarked food is purchased and consumed.

And into these states each week The American Weekly pours 86.7% of its circulation, a higher percentage of its circulation than any other publication.

To give some idea of the coverage of this mighty magazine, let us analyze its circulation.

The American Weekly concentrates and dominates in 536 of America's 812 towns and cities of 10,000 population and over.

In each of 185 cities, it reaches one out of every two families

In 132 more cities, 40 to 50% of the families

In an additional 102 cities, 30 to 40%

In another 117 cities, 20 to 30%

. . . and, in addition, nearly 2,000,000 families in thousands of other communities, large and small, regularly buy The American Weekly.

Now let's sum it up and see what The American Weekly has to offer the national food advertiser.

a. More than one out of every five families in the entire United States
b. Concentration of circulation in the richest buying areas
c. Color page advertising at less than ⅓ cent per family
d. Editorial interest that has built the largest magazine circulation in the world

Where can you spend your advertising dollar more effectively?

130 IN PERIL IN ATTEMPT TO BURN LYNN INFIRMARY

Closed Drawbridge Ties Up Charlestown-Everett Traffic

Travers Is Shy With This New Delight

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mary Lou Thurston, a beautiful and vivacious girl of the "home" type, orphaned by the death of her parents, lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson. The former is private secretary to a publisher, and the latter an engineer. Larry Mitchell, energetic young newspaper reporter, is Mary Lou's pal. Sanderson gets a wonderful business chance to go to the Orient and take his wife as secretary. Mary Lou is to stay temporarily with Grandma Jennings, Clara's mother. Larry is eager to marry Mary Lou and take care of her, but Mary Lou convinces him they are merely good pals and asks him to help her get a job. She applies at the Lorrimers' and is claimed by the son of the house as his war bride, named "Delight." Mary Lou qualifies as companion for Travers starts the task of bringing him out of shell-shock.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

By FAITH BALDWIN

Author of "The Office Wife," "Alimony" and Other Famous Serials.

"NO, I DON'T ride. I wish I did. I've never had the opportunity. Oh, I did gallop around on a pony once, the spring we were outside of London—Father had taken a funny little house and we had a wonderful time," replied Mary Lou, frankly.

They were quite alone in the room at the moment, and even if Peter that been there he wouldn't have mattered, being himself a part of the conspiracy, "but that's all the riding I ever did. I wonder if—I should?" she asked, rather incoherently, but Mrs Lorrimer understood.

Croquet Is Limit

"I don't think so. Travers never said anything about her riding. He used to ride very well, and loved it. He had his own horse when he was just a little chap. I rode, too, for many years until the doctors forbade it—not that there's anything wrong really, but get one time I overtaxed my strength and injured my heart, a little.

"I'm perfectly well now, but I don't go in for strenuous sports, Croquet," laughed Mrs. Lorrimer, "is about my athletic limit. That and walking. But I have kept up the stables, so we always have several saddle horses for chance guests and in case Travers ever takes it up again. I wish he would," she added wistfully.

"Then there are tennis courts on the place and three or four good holes of golf. I had those built after Travers came back, but he's never played them. He used to be so fond of all sports. Part of the garage is fitted up as a indoor gymnasium with squash and hand ball and all that. But he's never done more than just look inside. Summers, of course, we have excellent swimming."

At the Beach

After breakfast was over Mary Lou ran upstairs to fetch a little beret and coat and presently found herself out of doors exploring the grounds with interest and delight. There were, she learned from a lady friend gardener, about 22 acres, a good deal of it woodland. She wandered along well-kept paths between the outbuildings, peered into the garage, which housed several cars, one of them a smart roadster, looked through the thick glass of the outside greenhouses, and walked through the autumnal gardens, with their thick edges of boxwood, their rose arches, their sundials and green paths, and pictured easily enough what a glory of glowing color and fragrance they must be in summer. She went down to the white beach and breathed the cold, salt air and watched the ripples from along the shore. There was a swimming pier there with floats and slides and steps at all points so that the swimmer and beginner alike could be accommodated. There was also a boat house and looking in she saw canoes and rowboats and several motor boats of various sizes housed for the winter. She felt suddenly a little impatience toward Travers Lorrimer despite all her pity for him. He had so much, so much

SHE KNOWS HARD TIMES

SHE FINDS U. S. WOMEN SOFT

Lack of a "hard time background" was blamed today for America's slowness in overcoming depressions by Brighid Austen Stafford, "civil servant" of the Irish Free State, in a luncheon talk before the International Federation of University Women at the Women's City Club.

With other representatives of foreign countries who have been meeting at Wellesley, she was a guest of the organization today.

"In Ireland we knew hard times; were brought up on hard times, and, of course, could fight back and overcome them when they came," she said.

"We had a hard time background and knew how to face those things.

"The comparatively easy life in America has caused people to sit back and wait for the hard times to blow over."

She lauded America for the reception and cordiality accorded her here.

Other guests from foreign lands included Dr. Emma Fornanova of Czecho-Slovakia, Helga Krabbe, secretary of the Danish legation and Agnes von Zahn-Harnack, Berlin society leader.

Drops Dead Working

Charles M. Morrell, 67, of 25 Cutter ave., Somerville, dropped dead today while at work in a yard at 330 Summer st., Somerville. Morrell was repairing a board walk when he was seen to fall to the ground. Death was due to heart trouble.

COFFEE VICTIM SEEKS DIVORCE

Coffee that had been in the bean was on it in the Hanson household of Dorchester, when his wife poured hot coffee on his head, Herbert E Hanson testified today in Probate Court

Hanson, who lives in Savin Hill st., Dorchester, seeks a divorce from Mrs. Gertrude L. (Lindmark) Hanson, formerly of New York, and charges cruel and abusive treatment.

He testified before Judge Colin Campbell that his wife left him on the wedding night in Providence, February 12, 1928, and went back to New York. In defence of this Mrs Hanson testified she had to go back to give notice to her employers.

The wife declared the only time she roughed him was on one occasion when he insulted her and she slapped his face. She said she would be willing to go back to him if he would leave his mother's house.

Judge Campbell took the case under advisement.

FIRE ATTEMPT IN INFIRMARY IS FOILED

Aged Inmate Found Trying to Set Blaze in Lynn Institution Lately Condemned

Lives of 130 men and women inmates of the Lynn City Infirmary were saved from imminent danger early today by the timely interference of William Shaw, night watchman, who discovered an 81-year-old patient hurling lighted matches to all corners of his room.

The infirmary, condemned as a "firetrap" in a report to Mayor J. Fred Manning from Harold J. McCann, State building inspector, would have been in flames with little means of escape had the actions of Nahun Alger, inmate, been overlooked by the watchman in his rounds.

Alger was today committed to the State Hospital at Danvers.

BURNED 21 MATCHES

When found by Watchman Shaw, Alger was said to have been seated in the corner of his room, hurling lighted matches to the far corners of the darkened area. Twenty-one burned matches were p ked up

Occupants of the City Infirmary aged and infirm, would have had little chance to flee for their lives authorities said today

It is believed that Alger stuffed his pocket at night before retiring to the men's wing of the home and when the lights went out, took position in his own room and promiscuously threw matches after lighting them

HAD READ REPORT

It is further believed that he carried out this little scheme after reading McCann's report in the newspapers and decided to prove to the mayor and city officials that the building inspector was correct

Alger had been carrying out this activity for some time. It is believed, but the lighted matches had failed to start a fire

Superintendent H. Herbert Richardson and other infirmary officials agreed that it was sheer good fortune that 130 aged men and women occupants did not have to flee for their lives

Two Youths Charged With Truck Theft

A novel charge of larceny was presented in Taunton court today by police of Easton who charged two Pawtucket, R. I. youths with thefts from a moving truck on the highway.

Cambridge Girl Held as Gun-Toter

Charged with carrying a loaded revolver, Angelina Zarilla, 18, of Donnell st., Cambridge, was held in $1000 bail for the Grand Jury by Judge Sturtevant in Somerville District court today. She pleaded not guilty and waived examination

The girl was arrested April 2 as the result of a telephone call from a Somerville man father of four children, who said she had arranged a meeting with him and that she was waiting for him and was carrying a gun.

HUNDREDS OF AUTOS CAUGHT IN BIG JAM

Drivers Turn to "L," Leaving Machines Parked in the Streets and Lots

One of the worst traffic tieups in years on roads leading into Boston occurred today at the Alford st. drawbridge over the Mystic river near Sullivan sq. The bridge connects Broadway, Everett, with Alford st., Charlestown, and is used by thousands as a gateway to the city.

The bridge was closed for repairs in accordance with announcements but motorists seemed to have forgotten the warning over the week-

Cars poured through Broadway as far as the bridge until there were so many of them that it was impossible to turn around and take another route.

Everett police saved the situation after a long delay. Most of the motorists ran their cars into nearby lots and parked them, using the elevated to get into the city, rather than detour via Wellington or Chelsea bridge

The bride is the daughter of Mr. Mary Winter of Winthrop Highlands

Storm Warning on Coast; Rain Due Here

Storm warnings were issued by the weather bureau today for the coast from Nantucket to Eastport Me., accompanied by a report that a disturbance of moderate intensity was moving northeastward from the Virginia Capes

Overcast skies with occasional rain will be Boston's fare for about 24 hours, the weather man predicted. Off the New England coast a strong northeast wind was blowing and rain was falling. The temperature is due to drop to 38 degrees tonight.

Bitten by Dog

Martin Ford, 15, of 142 Maple st., West Roxbury, was being treated today for injury to his hip when he was bitten by a dog near his home yesterday. (Staff photo.)

BICYCLE BOYS ROUNDED UP

Three Lawrence boys and the two bicycles on which they set out for an excursion to Boston, all started back home today after a night at the Somerville police station, where the officers let them sleep

The boys are Vincent Allen, 13 of Concord ave.; Constantine Elnicopolos 14 of Lowell st and Alfred Moreau of Bradford rd.

It wasn't very easy going with so much motor traffic and two of the boys struggling along on the one "bike," so they weren't at all sorry when Motorcycle Officer Edward Kiley stopped them on the Northern Artery about 9 o'clock last night. They were taken to the station to await arrival of their parents.

Leo Reisman to Play at Bradford Hotel

The Bradford Hotel is to inaugurate a new policy within the next two weeks. Leo Reisman, Boston's own celebrity, who founded the Leo Reisman Orchestra, will personally appear to introduce a native Cuban band, a novelty to Boston. This band will accompany a team of Cuban society dancers who will introduce the Rumba dance.

$50 Weekly for News Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor at Liberty 4000.

What is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event while it is happening. Bring your pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use.

2 HELD AS SLAYERS OF BROOKLINE OFFICER FACE TRIAL IN JUNE

HURLEY PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO DEATH CHARGE

Authorities Ready in June for Two Held in Slaying of Patrolman O'Brien

The trial of the two youths held for the murder of Patrolman Joseph P. O'Brien of Brookline on Apr. 3 1930, will take place the first week in June, it was announced today.

The statement was made when Paul V Hurley, 19, recently arrested in Baltimore, was arraigned in Dedham Superior Court and held without bail after pleading not guilty to a charge of murder.

Thomas G. Hurley, also indicted for the policeman's murder, is at liberty under $5000 bail.

Assistant District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing informed Judge Alfred Gray that the murder trial had been assigned for the first week in June.

O'Brien was shot three times in a battle with two young auto thieves in Ivy st. on the night of August 3 last. Albert Daniels of 2 Linden st., Allston, also commandeered by the policeman in his attempt to capture the thieves, was shot in the back, but recovered.

Healey, whose home is in Pittsburgh, was arrested a short time later, but claimed Hurley had fired the fatal shots. After a widespread hunt Hurley was taken into custody in Baltimore on March 23 last and is said to have admitted the shooting.

JEWS TO OPEN $100,000 DRIVE

The Associated Jewish Philanthropies will open an emergency relief fund campaign April 13, to replenish the treasury, which is exhausted after a winter of record relief giving.

A minimum of $100,000 in cash contributions is the goal set in the three-day relief drive for the unemployed.

A. W. Kaffenburgh

Albert W. Kaffenburgh, former president of the Federated Jewish Charities, is chairman of the drive committee. Assisting him are Sidney Rabinowitz, David M. Watchmaker, vice-chairmen; Max E. Wyzanski, treasurer, and Mrs. N. H. Whitman, chairman of the women's committee.

A rally will be held next Sunday night at Temple Ohabei Shalom, Beacon and Marshall sts, Brookline. Volunteer campaign workers and supporters of the philanthropies have been invited to attend.

Pointing to the unprecedented demands now being made for aid, Kaffenburgh said:

"The present income of the Philanthropies from its 1930-31 pledges made last fall is insufficient to meet the needs of the 19 constituent institutions.

"With hundreds of Jewish families actually in want in food, the Philanthropies have no other recourse than the emergency appeal being made at this time. Those who have given, must give again."

UNITED FRUIT GOING INTO OIL?

Mayor Curley predicted that the United Fruit Company would some day enter the oil business.

Sixty years ago today a shipment of 5000 bananas arrived by sailing vessel. Today a shipment of 4,000,000 was being unloaded here from the United Fruit vessel San Gil.

The mayor presented to Capt Mathers an etching of Boston harbor as it appeared a century ago.

"An annual advertising budget of $100,000 in the hands of the Massachusetts Industrial Commission would bring in new tourists, increase factory demands and create new markets. This would be decided help to unemployment."

He pointed out the appropriations of other states for the same purpose. Maine, he said, appropriated $100,000 yearly; North Carolina, $140,000; Georgia, $250,000; Texas, $375,000, and California, the vast amount of $1,365,000.

WITNESS SAYS GOODMAN WAS PAID TWICE

Clarke Admits at Disbarment Hearing That a Mistake Was Made

Testimony that Atty. Robert Goodman, whose disbarment is sought by the Boston Bar Association, collected twice on one claim, was given in Superior Court today before Judge James H. Sisk.

Howard R. Clarke, formerly of Audubon rd., testified he paid a claim to Goodman and later the lawyer's agents collected money from his mother, Mrs. Belle T. Clarke.

Under cross-examination he admitted Goodman said two different claims had been made by the Associated Tire Corp., and that the whole matter was a mistake.

The hearing, in which Goodman is charged with unprofessional conduct, began Thursday.

Clarke testified that on April 28, 1928, he was served with papers in the tire company's suit, and on April 30 he paid Goodman $18.85, the check being made out to the tire company. He said he was given a receipt, only later to be notified he had been defaulted in Municipal Court.

The witness said he notified the clerk of court the suit had been settled and went to New York to live. He next heard that his mother had paid $20 in settlement of the same claim.

Under cross-examination Clarke said he talked over the case a month ago with Goodman, but denied saying something about payment of $300.

200 SEE FREAK PLANE STUNT

More than 200 people watched the newly-arrived Pitcairn autogyro in "suspended operation" at East Boston Airport today.

Capt. Julian Dexter, formerly of Boston, and pilot during the tour, stayed aloft for 40 minutes today while the crowd below watched him put the new-type "windmill" plane into motionless stalls and slow glides. Twice he brought the plane to earth in almost vertical landings.

Charles B. Jones, general manager of Standard Oil, Bowers branch, presented Pilot Dexter with a Boston bull pup as a mascot. The dog will accompany his new master during his demonstration flights this afternoon.

VOICE OF FATHER COUGHLIN REACHES FROM TINY PARISH OVER NATION

IN HIS HOME, WITH HIS DOG

This, and the other exclusive pictures of the Rev. Charles F. Coughlin, portray him at home and in his church, where he broadcasts sermons which reach the ears of millions. Here he is with his Great Dane, Pal, reading in his home. Pal is his constant companion.

RADIO IS HIS FORTE

Not quite 40 years of age, he came to Shrine of the Little Flower, in Royal Oak, Mich., in 1926. His parish consisted of but 26 families and had little money. Now he is building the country's greatest roadside shrine at a cost of $750,000.

DYNAMIC

Some call him radical. But when an attempt was made to temper his sermons, he made an appeal over the radio that brought 350,000 letters of commendation.

FR. COUGHLIN'S DYNAMIC PLEAS STIR NATION

"By the sweat of thy brow Thou shalt earn thy daily bread."

This has been the lifelong motto of Rev. Charles F Coughlin, whose voice from his little roadside shrine at Royal Oak, Mich., delivers dynamic sermons over the radio to all corners of America.

And so it is no wonder that men and women the country over, who earn their daily bread by hard work, have come to view him as a fearless friend and benefactor.

More than 350,000 letters of commendation have been sent to him since his sermons began, and while he has asked no money, funds are being supplied by voluntary donation which will permit him to build the nation's greatest roadside shrine.

He was sent to Royal Oak in 1926 by Bishop Gallagher to found the Shrine of the Little Flower, but the small sum of money allotted—the parish numbered only 26 families—rapidly dwindled.

Fr. Coughlin decided to "go on the air," and immediately crowds began to throng to his shrine. The broadcast was taken up by the Columbia network and the whole nation heard it. The network made his words available to 60,000,000 listeners.

Of an Irish-American father and an Irish-Canadian mother, Fr. Coughlin was born in Hamilton, Ontario, October 25, 1891. He was graduated from Toronto University in 1911 and was ordained to the priesthood in 1916.

After considerable teaching he was made assistant pastor at Kalamazoo in 1922. Six months later he was made assistant pastor at St. Leo's, Detroit, and in 1925 pastor at North Branch, Mich. The Royal Oak appointment followed the next year.

The second and concluding article about Father Coughlin will appear in tomorrow's American.]

Police Probe Death of Weymouth Man

Weymouth police today investigated the death of Patrick J. Donlan, 65, who was taken to the Weymouth Hospital yesterday after what he said was "a fall down stairs" in a River st. boarding house.

MAINE CENTRAL BALKS MERGER

President Morris McDonald of the Maine Central Railroad told the legislative committee on transportation at the State House today that consolidations thus far proposed do not interest his company.

The Maine Central, he said, would rather be left alone than be included in the proposed all-New England consolidation or any of the trunk line teups

He cited that since 1913 the Boston & Maine, which formerly controlled his road, has not owned a share of stock in the Maine Central, nor does the Pennsylvania railroad or the Penn Road Corp.

The present committee hearings were prompted by Gov. Ely's inaugural remarks urging steps to prevent swallowing of New England lines by the Pensylvania or anybody else until the state found out what it all was leading to.

If the Maine Central is going to be linked up with any other road, the stockholders would probably prefer a tieup with the Boston & Maine, he stated, but they would like to keep their minds open until a definite picture is presented.

"The Maine Central probably gets as much traffic now as it could after any consolidation," he said. "The majority of its stock is owned in Maine.

"It is my opinion that there is too much regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission now, and I think the whole Transportation Act should be revamped."

Whether consolidation could help the port of Boston he said depended on what rates were established

FRUSTRATION CORNER

The things that I desire to do
In seasons opportune are few;
But when I've work that must be done
I know unnumbered forms of fun
That would delight me—I can't doubt them.
As long as I just think about them,
When I am out, I would be in;
In quietude I yearn for din.
And, oh, I look with great delight
Upon sobriety when tight—
Though sober, I can see no point in
Not being some (speakeasy) joint in.
Wherever I'm, my needs all chase
Themselves into some other place.
When up, I much admire my bed;
When in it, I'd be up instead.
But all this does not keep me flitting—
I merely compromise on sitting.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

THE LOVE DEBT

She Tires of Husband

GERTRUDE BENTON ■ veyed the past ten years of her life—nervously, emotionally. She was about to take a bold, reckless step for which all the world would be sure to condemn her. But her happiness—well, a force much stronger than that—was impelling her to act. And she needed reasons to fortify her conscience.

Ten years of marriage to Benjamin, a dull, boring, stay-at-home, was more than any woman cared to stand. She marveled at herself how she managed to last that long.

And there was something else. Ben had a pest; he hadn't told her until after they were married, and she somehow held it against him.

More and more she wondered how she could ever have loved him.

And yet, he had been kind to her. He had let her step out alone to bridge parties, theaters, to dances. And he was a fine, generous fusctions she had met Whitney Colbert.

What a difference between the men. Whitney—a handsome, gay, witty, dynamic bachelor. From their first meeting she had felt they were kindred spirits. Nor had Whitney been laggard in laying siege to her heart.

She had resisted his wooing at first—for the sake of little Elsie. When she had realized for certain that her love for her husband had died—she had tried to forget herself in her devotion to their child. And she had succeeded in a measure—until Whitney had come into her life. With all the moralities with which she had been inoculated in her childhood days she fought against him—and her inner self.

But the battle was vain. Even though Whitney did not seemed too enthusiastic about her plans, Gertrude had decided to do "the decent thing." She felt that to continue to live with her husband would be dishonest. So now she was packing her trunk and waiting for the child to return from school.

She penned a polite note of explanation to her husband, trying to make it as easy as possible for him to bear. Then she phoned for a taxi and left with Elsie.

When Benjamin came home and found the note he told himself he had been much too good to her, too lenient. And the fact that in taking the child along—that was an unheard of outrage.

But by the time he had raged for divorce and the case reached the court, his anger had cooled. Despite her exasperating traits, away he will love her. Her absence had made him realize it all the more. He made a final plea for her return. But she preferred the divorce and asked no alimony.

The court battle centered about the custody of the child.

With all her womanly intensity she fought for the possession of Elsie. She martialed an imposing array of facts and figures to prove she had been an ideal mother. She cited the child's own love for her.

Benjamin did not dispute her statements, but appealed to the court.

The presiding justice awarded custody of the child to Benjamin, and, as a sop to mercy, permitted Gertrude to visit her once a month.

While the case was on, Whitney had considered it prudent to leave town on business. So, the night the verdict was rendered Gertrude wrote him. A long and loving letter. All her pent-up spirits she poured into that letter. She told him she had lost everything, including her child—but that she was now free for them to try and build a new happiness upon the wreckage of her old one.

Benjamin went home with Elsie and tried to rebuild his own shattered life. Dull and plodding of temperament, he did not know how to fill the void left by Gertrude.

The child's plight was even worse. Her father's efforts to amuse her merely bewildered her. He did not know how to be gay and light-hearted. The woman he had engaged to clean and cook and care for the house was no substitute for her mother.

Whitney's failure to return at once worried her, so she wrote him again, impassioned and insistent. He replied that business was keeping him away, but began to sense something had gone wrong.

At the end of the 30 days, Whitney was still away on business. She phoned Benjamin's office that she planned to come and see the child.

Elsie fell upon her as soon as she entered and smothered her. She hugged the child tightly and felt her scalding tears against her cheeks. In a corner of the room stood Benjamin, stiff and formal.

She placed Elsie at arms' length and looked at her. The child was haggard and thin, and her mother's heart was touched.

Suddenly she looked at ——— who but recently had been her husband. "Ben," she cried, "what has happened to Elsie?"

"She needs a mother," he declared, looking directly into her eyes. "You don't look any too well yourself."

She stared at him through a sudden mist. "Now you," she replied softly.

"Perhaps," ventured Benjamin, "we should each either, too." Then after a pause: "Do you think, we ——r—could make a go of it if we tried again?"

All the frozen feelings Gertrude had smothered for the past month suddenly burst within her. She threw her arms around Benjamin and sobbed.

All names of characters in this story are fictitious.

Wrong to Blame Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I am madly infatuated with a girl whom I have known for only a short time, while she in turn feels the same toward me. When I am with her everything is all right, but other times I feel grouchy.

Would you advise me to keep on seeing her regardless of the outcome, or is it best to stop now before it is too late? Or, do you think that I really love her and to give her up would not benefit either of us? Neither of us are in a position to marry.

"SAME."

Dear Same: Why attribute your irritable moods to love? Maybe they're due to indigestion, or a spring fever and its accompanying disinclination to brace up and earn the good old pay envelope. You know "mad intentions" have a way of curing themselves. They burn themselves out as quickly as a match.

She Wouldn't Interrupt Him

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

There is a young man I often see when going to business. I have known him about two years. We became friends through business matters. He had always been very polite and friendly until one day when he was at the phone, and I passed him without bowing, although he looked up at me. I did not care to interrupt him and, ever since, he just gives me a quick glance and turns away.

I know of nothing I did to offend him unless he thinks I should speak to him first. I paid no attention to his strange actions for a long time, but always tried to look pleasant. I do not think anyone could have spoken ill of me. I still feel very much perplexed about it, and will appreciate your advice.

What do you think of my penmanship?

MILDRED.

Dear Mildred: If the circumstances are as you describe, the young man strikes me as being unduly sensitive. Perhaps he tried to speak to you on some other occasion and you didn't see you. I believe you might take the first step towards making up, without any loss of dignity. Your writing is fair. It will be better when it's more formed.

What's in Fashion in Coats

NEW YORK, April 6—Hundreds of thousands of fashionable women voted yesterday for their favorite Spring coat. They voted for it by wearing it in the thousands of Easter parades all over the country.

Among the many coats shown at Easter this spring we've chosen six of those chosen by fashionable women as examples of some of the most useful coats you can have.

Women choose these coats because they're good looking, easy to wear, individual. And because they make smart ensembles with dresses. Here they are:

Scarf Coats

(1). The coat with the scarf neckline is a leading favorite.

Not any one particular scarf. But fabric scarfs and fur scarfs, long scarfs and short scarfs. Scarfs that drape or button or tie. They're easy to wear because you can adjust them in so many different ways.

Who's who and who's shecked (at the bottom of the illustration) with the practical fur scarf that's so popular. The scarf can be tied, draped or left to hang loose.

Shawl Collar Coats

(2) The coat with the shawl collar isn't new, but it's one of the most important Spring fashions. And it's becoming for almost anybody. And because so many women like the flattery of the soft long-haired furs these collars are made of.

Some of them are long shawl collars, extending almost to the waistline. More of them are shorter. Some are one-sided shawls, with a wide, almost cape-like collar on one side and narrow on the other. These can be draped up around the throat or left hanging.

The center figure shows a smart shawl collar coat with the fur set back a little from the edge.

Narrow Roll Collars

(3) A new kind of coat this Spring has quickly become a leading fashion—the coat with the narrow roll collar.

It can be worn with a silk scarf or with no scarf at all and be equally smart.

The sketch at the top illustrates one of these coats and shows the wider way that's often found with this narrow collar.

(4) A coat almost as fashionable as the very latest—but not quite as new—is the coat without any collar at all. It's sleek and sophisticated. But you can make it feminine by putting the collar of your coat outside or by adding a new scarf.

(5) You saw lots of cape coats last Spring—so they're not a new type. But they're still fashionable. And the 1931 capes is different.

It's smaller this year, fits the shoulders closely and sometimes is draped in the front in the manner of a fichu. A popular coat with the younger folks

Military Coats

(6)—A sixth outstandingly fashionable Spring coat is the one that has a military look. And that means it is one of two types.

It's fitted at the waistline, closes in double-breasted style and has wide lapels. And then it's a reefer style of coat. Directoire, it's called

Or it has wide revers that button over or fall loose (as you please) and deep gauntlet cuffs. And then it looks like a military officer's uniform coat.

Of course there are other fashionable coats. But these are six of those most in fashion. Most in fashion because more women like them than any other kinds.

Seating Dinner Guests

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MISS BEECKMAN:

1. In sending one's plate for a second helping, what do you do with your knife and fork?

2. In sending one's card the day of an afternoon tea, when one cannot attend, should you write "regret" or anything on the card?

3. I am going to entertain my aunt and her husband and I want to make her guest of honor. Where shall I seat her at the table; a dinner of eight?

4. When a gentleman is going to present his wife and his aunt to another gentleman, if the lady should he present the gentleman first, the aunt being his guest?

When a gentleman is going to introduce another gentleman to his wife and his sister, the sister being his hostess, to which lady should he present the gentleman first?

"A" thinks the wife should always be first

"B" thinks the guest should be first.

The gentleman thinks he should introduce them as they are seated. He does not think the wife is entitled to any more than the other ladies present. So we are leaving it to you.

A. K.

1. A very definite thing . . . when we pass our plate for a second helping, the knife and fork are left on the plate, placed as second as possible so that they will not be pushed from the plate as it is being passed. This means that the knife and fork are placed together, in the center of the plate, the knife on the right and the fork on the left, as they would be at the place, parallel to each other, and the handles turned a bit toward right. If we take them from the plate there is nothing to do with them . . . we can hold them in the hand, for this looks very awkward.

2 Do not write anything on the card. The fact that you are sending the card carries its message that you are "regretting" the invitation.

3. The woman guest of honor is placed at the right of the host. Your aunt will expect to occupy this place. And her husband, who will be the man guest of honor, is given the seat at the right of the hostess, at your right.

4. When the woman is in the role of hostess, it is she who is given the first introduction. When there is no question of host-ship involved, as for instance, when they meet on the street, then the aunt or the sister would be given the first introduction.

When a Gift is Not Necessary

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A young man who works with me has invited me to his engagement party. What I want to know is: If I do not attend this party, is it necessary for me to send a gift? And if so, should I send it to his fiancee's home?

I am not very well acquainted with the girl, but I have been introduced to her.

If you do not attend the party it is not at all necessary for you to send a gift. But it would be gracious if you wrote a note saying that it is impossible for you to attend.

New Rinse Brightens the Hair

By MISS HUDDLESTON.

hair cleanliness is fast growing away from the abundant use of THE MODERN tendency in soap and water, and although its advisability remains a moot question, there isn't any doubt but what dry shampoo is daily becoming more popular.

Josephine Huddleston

The cry is that hard water and soaps high in alkaline content are drying the hair and thus often prove true. In addition to this tendency, bleaching, tinting, rinsing and dyeing treatments in each common use today complicate the matter.

It has been discovered that bleached hair retains its natural gloss and health almost perfectly when certain types of oil shampoo replace soap and water cleansing. The same thing holds true with dyed hair. When either a dye or bleach job is shampooed frequently with ordinary soap and water, however, an excessively dry condition results.

There we have the old-faithfuls of yesteryear, the orris root, cornmeal, white of egg and salt. It is the latter one that I want to stress today for it proves highly beneficial in more ways than one.

Ordinary table salt is the preparation used for this marvelous shampoo. Salt, as we all know, is highly purifying and cleansing and, although a bit edious to use, the resultant beauty of the hair makes it well worth the trouble

Just sprinkle a liberal amount of salt through the hair and massage the scalp thoroughly.

Continue the massage for five or ten minutes, adding more salt from time to time and rubbing it through the hair as well as onto the scalp. When the massage is finished the hair must be brushed and shaken until all salt has been removed.

All salt removed from the hair, you will find your scalp glowing with the pinkish tinge which indicates stimulated circulation and, in addition to this all trace of dandruff and impurities will be gone, leaving the skin immaculate.

Poetry Is Shown in Figures

By PROF. HENDERSON.

ROGER BACON, and centuries later, Francis Bacon, play important roles in the history of science. They are supposed, and rightly, to have formulated into a sort of system of philosophy the methods employed by Pythagoras. Theory, experiment, demonstration. What could be simpler or more natural?

But this method of testing everything is running into grave difficulties nowadays. We cannot get hold of them; we cannot travel out to an island universe, spiral nebula or globular cluster. The middle ground, of science is pretty fully explored, but we are baffled at the boundaries.

Man, who has flattered himself so long upon his "conquest of nature," suddenly has stopped slapping himself on the back, and has begun to smile on the wrong side of his mouth. Nature herself has begun to take a hand in this game.

Suppose nature refuses to be conquered! It is beginning to dawn on the scientists that his technique is getting clumsy and inadequate. The mysteries of nature are not yielding so readily to study, yet only so far and then no farther. In order to progress we must refine our technique.

Perhaps we shall be compelled to resort to a higher form of imagination than any to which we have resorted in the past.

As Scott Buchanan says in his stimulating book, Poetry and Mathematics: "There is something unresistant in both the whimsical and uncontrollable universe of ideas does to our experience, something with which Pythagoras, Paito, Plotinus, St. Augustine, Nicolas of Cusa, Galileo, Kant, and probably Einstein would be more familiar than the modern prophets who preach the control of nature."

Einstein, Planck, Rohr have introduced poetry in mathematics; the imagination is the universe to be organized in highly complex ways formerly unsuspected or unbelieved.

We are not able to disprove the conclusions of these poets; for the unexpected organisms which they might postulate, in other words, imagine, "come out right."

They give results we know to be true. They conform to reality. They are verified by experiment.

Can we be sure, for example, that there is no such thing as absolute velocity? Certainly not. Michelson and Morley devised a technique for finding absolute velocity; but their machine didn't give the expected result.

Then result was null Einstein postulated, then, that absolute velocity was not only not found, but could not ever be found, and consequently did not exist.

But after all, the question is not really settled. Perhaps a physicist, with a more poetic, a more imaginative mind, will devise a more refined technique and ultimately determine absolute velocity

Get Advice Prior to Illness

By DR. COPELAND.

THERE IS an enormous economic loss from ill health and disease. This cause costs the industrial world about $3,000,000,000 each year.

A n y thing that prevents individuals from contributing with their work is expensive to society. Sickness ■ chief of the factors of loss. In many instances the disease is a preventible one.

With proper education and training it is possible to decrease this loss. It is hoped that future generations will eliminate it entirely.

It is often said that the future of medicine lies in the direction of preventing disease and not in curing it. This is undoubtedly true. The medical profession recognizes the importance of the program of disease prevention. It now remains with the public to understand this problem and to cooperate with the doctors.

I have frequently referred to the importance of being examined by a doctor every six months. This should be done regardless of the state of health. It is a part of the plan to detect disease as early as possible and perhaps to prevent it

Many who apparently are perfectly well will be surprised at the number of defects uncovered by periodic health examinations. As a rule no physical complaint has preceded such an examination. If permitted to go unrecognized, one of these defects might lead to discomfort and serious result

I can never understand why so many men will give great care to their cars, yet entirely neglect their own bodies. Upon the slightest "knock or squeak" they will run to the service station and have the car completely overhauled. They never give themselves the overhauling, and call the physician only after the body has been damaged.

Make-Believe -:- By Faith Baldwin

more, even, than was necessary, and certainly more than enough to win him back to health and happiness and to usefulness as a citizen of the world.

She wondered if Mrs. Lorrimer in her anxiety for him had not perhaps given in to him too much. If he had been a poor man, he would not have spent his days and months and years as a semi-invalid, waited on hand and foot. He would have had to earn a living. Mrs. Lorrimer had told her that there was a good deal of money connected with her late husband's very large estate. His son was, thought Mary Lou, certainly the person to take over the management of the estate. He was old enough, she continued musing, a little irritated, "to do nothing," permitted the whole burden to fall upon his mother and her hired assistant. It was ridiculous, she thought; he wasn't organically ill, he just—brooded! Only a rich man can afford to brood! thought Mary Lou.

After she had explored buildings and roadways and beach she cut off through a little path in the woods and spent an enchanted hour wandering, getting lost, finding her way again. She trees were bare, for the most part, save for a few which clung tenaciously to what was left of their autumnal glory, and of course the living evergreens and cedars

Her morning's task finished, Mrs. Lorrimer went upstairs and knocked at her son's door. Peter waited him expertly, and so she found him dressed, standing idly by his sitting room window His rooms were comfortable and pleasant, furnished for a man with sound, good taste, full of sunlight and colors rather too bright nor too subdued. There were really fine etchings on the walls and the bookcases were filled with the books he had loved as a child and a young man

"Well, Travers?" she asked quietly.

He put out a hand and drew her close to him. He loved her very much If only, sometime, he could shake off this dark cloud of doubt of himself and misgiving about both past and future and could tell her so. He depised himself for a burden, a bit of human wreckage, which had not, somehow, the strength to rebuild himself into something which could ed . . . . which would be useful, alert . . . vital

"Very well," he said smiling, "there's nothing the matter with me, really, except my infernal dolesomeness."

"That was true. His health was as good as health can be which is neglected in essentials. His constitution was sound; the physical effects of his crash and imprisonment had long since been overcome. But nervously he was in bad shape. He ate little, slept less. He cared for nothing, very much, unless it were his mother, and for her he didn't somehow seem to care to the extent of pulling himself together. He now asked with a certain painful embarrassment

"Delight?"

"She's out walking," Mrs. Lorrimer told him, easily enough "She slept well and breakfasted with me. We—missed you."

"Does she want to see me?" he asked, flushing.

"Well, of course she wants to see you! She—she was pretty upset by the events of yesterday," the mother told him, "she's a little shy of you, Travers. You must overlook that; you'll have to win her back to—friendship, again."

"I'm shy of her, too, as you put it," he answered, r little bitterly. "When I saw her sitting there, you don't know what it was like, Mother, a great crushing weight lifted from my heart, windows in a dark room thrown open to blinding sunlight. But when I saw how she felt, of course, I couldn't understand, and I made an idiot of myself. I would," he commented, acidly, "Mathews explained, naturally, and I suppose if do see her stupefied—thinking me dead and all that, forgetting me, must like'y. But now—well, sometimes I think I can't wait another moment to see her, and then I feel as if I never wanted to lay eyes on her again."

"Don't be absurd," said Mrs. Lorrimer, speaking with rare sharpness, "the situation exists. It is, primarily, of your own making. It has to be faced, Travers. And by you.

Tomorrow—How Travers faced the odd situation.

Financial Market News, Stocks, Bonds, Commodities and Comment

No Decisive Trend Is Yet Discernible

Business Is Still Moving Sideways; Some Look for a Stock Drop

By B. C. Forbes

New York, April 5—No decisive movement yet in industry. Easter trade reports cheerful. General price level stationary. Unemployment slightly less. Securities down. Sentiment cautious.

That summary conveys that the new quarter has not brought any drastic or decisive developments. It cannot be claimed that optimism is unqualified as it was at New Year. The first quarter has been something of a disappointment in that there has been little, if any, more than seasonal recovery. Admittedly, the country has held its own, instead of a 4-to-4-and course, conditions are forming the base of a U

Whether spring will complete the sideways movement and inaugurate a rise is now rather widely doubted. The more general expectation is that no vigorous upswing is probable until fall.

Consequently, stocks bought when expectations were brighter have lately been passing from strong into weaker hands.

Saturday's rally was entirely logical. Whether it marks a definite change in the market's trend remains to be seen.

As has been true for weeks on end, favorable developments at one point is offset by an unfavorable development at another.

There are such irregular movements as a rather sharp increase in consumption of electric power and a drop of 24 per cent in bank clearings as compared with a year ago; practically no net change in the general price level for March but a severe drop in wheat futures and in other grains; a modest gain in automobile output but much more reports of wages and salary reductions; moderate betterment in railway earnings but urgent petition by shippers that they expect to need somewhat fewer cars this quarter; depression (not unreasonable) in steel production but a rise in cotton textile production; heavier output of automobiles but another relapse in rubber, cotton and copper; continued omissions and reductions of dividends but some diminution in commercial failures.

Perhaps it was fitting that Bradstreet's should record a slight advance in commodity prices and Dun's a slight decline for last month

A word of caution against attaching too much importance to "decrease" may be in order.

When chain stores, manufacturers, mail order houses, department stores and other basic gauges report decreases of 10 or 15 or 20 per cent in sales, the interpretation is likely to be unfavorable. Enough consideration is not given to the fact that there has been a corresponding decline in prices. In many instances there has been no shrinkage in the volume of goods made or moved. One might even go further and say that it is unlikely that there will be consumption in the United States will continue to grow even slowly without extreme conservatism.

The optimism which was generated in the financial world has been tempered by disappointment over the failure of the gilt-edged bond market to advance impressively. Traditionally, the best bonds must lead the way to a sustained upward movement in stocks. Lately the bond market has been sluggish and weak, notwithstanding the continued superabundance of extremely cheap money in Wall Street and better balanced money markets in Europe.

Not a few conservative investors have been turning part of their security holdings into cash in the hope of being able to rebuy at lower quotations some time during the next few months. Their reasoning may or may not prove correct

The writer is inclined to believe that if a substantial decline sets in this spring or summer it will afford an ideal opportunity—and perhaps the final opportunity—to accumulate bargains for long-term investment

1931 U. S. TIRE TOTAL NEARLY 90,000,000

By FRANK H. MELOON

Rubber companies will benefit this year by the greatly increased tire needs of automobiles, Alexander Hamilton Institute sees the current year's probable total around 90,000,000 tires. Shipments in 1930 were but 54,000,000. Continued slump in raw rubber prices is the factor that has put the rubber company stocks down, requiring large inventory write-offs. With these out of the way, their path stock marketwise will be more comfortable

* * *

Tires of modern make last much longer than those of a few years ago. Some automobile owners complained that we are being given too good tires. This complaint exists favorably for a major American industry.

Benjamin A. Franklin

Dana B. Forbes

B. C. Forbes

President Benjamin A. Franklin of Associated Industries of Massachusetts hits the nail squarely on the head when he says:

"The new competition, gradually growing, is to produce a better article, to sell at a profit, to understand the market demands, to build a happy organization, to know competitors personally and deal fairly with them in full expectation of like treatment.

"This is co-operative competition. It can build. And it pays every one, even the public with the public's family, which, after all, in the large majority, is not quite so much a buying public as a working public. Every industrial unit, in its own trade, can work for co-operative competition."

President Rome C. Stephenson of the American Bankers Assn., visiting Boston explained he was working to have savings banks made eligible for membership in the Federal Reserve System, so that they may be able to take advantage of the vast resources of the system and the rediscount privilege if need be. He said that an arrangement might be secured whereby the banks could deposit bonds or other securities with the Federal Reserve banks in order to come in.

* * *

We find no enthusiasm among New England savings bank leaders regarding the movement to bring them into the Federal Reserve System. Perhaps it would be beneficial to banks in many other parts of country working under less well-designed laws than those which govern Massachusetts savings banks.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

The market has not emerged from its narrow and professional form. After the first hour today most of the accumulation of buying and selling orders had been filled. Then dullness set in again, and floor traders were the principal buyers and sellers of stock around at current levels so that further progress of the decline should be orderly in character. While the weak character of recent selling promises a technical rally, such recovery is likely to be of very limited duration."

Cash Register to Show a Recession

For first quarter of 1931 National Cash Register Co. probably will show a loss from operations. Following a comparatively good final three months of 1930, when approximately 60 per cent of that year's income was earned, business in both domestic and foreign fields since then has slowed down appreciably. In the first quarter of 1930 net income amounted to $912,640.

FRESH SELLING ABSORBED IN DULL MARKET

New York, April 6—Fresh selling was absorbed in today's dealings on the New York Stock Exchange.

Saturday's rally was carried over into the forenoon trading, but, as steel common failed to follow, the list turned downward.

TRADING IS DULL

Trading was so dull it came close to a standstill during the middle of the day, but bears sold heavily in the last hour, and the list ranged generally 1 to 4 points lower in a week closing. Sales approximated only 1,850,000 shares.

U. S. Steel dropped more than 3 points to within little more than 2 of its December low. Other issues losing 2 to 4 included Bethlehem, McKeesport, American Water Works, New York Central, duPont, International Harvester, Johns-Manville and Westinghouse.

Columbian Carbon and Pullman both dropped 4 to new low, reflecting dividend uncertainties. The latter recorded a new minimum for the present shares.

AUBURN IS LIVELY

The morning advance was virtually erased. Auburn, after shooting up 15 points, fell back 21 from the top.

American Telephone, American Can, North American, Woolworth, General Electric and Liggett and Myers "B" lost a point or more.

With the early spring shopping season ending by the passing of Easter, and rival mill owners busily advancing signs of having reached a seasonal peak, Wall Street has entered a period of "watchful waiting."

The scanty amount of real liquidation which has appeared in the stock market is regarded as the most encouraging aspects of the situation. Necessitous liquidation appears to have been well mopped up last December, and the distribution of fixed trust shares seems to be taking up much of the trickle of discouraged selling by investors.

Weekly surveys of investment advisory issues continue to stress the opportunities offered by what seems to be low area of a major economic cycle, but at the same time suggest purchases of equity shares on this declines.

The bond market was dull and sluggish. Call money rose to 2, then to 2½ per cent, the highest since Jan. 2. After renewals at 1¾, probably reflecting withdrawals in connection with the government offering of Treasury certificates expected tomorrow.

Last Hockey and First Baseball Games of Season ↑ Will Be Played Here This Week; Or Ring and Mat ↓

LOCAL SPORTS MENU FOR THE WEEK

WITH THE LAST hockey and the first baseball game of the season both on the local sports menu, this week is an outstanding one in sport in this neck of the woods. Tons in two big wrestling shows and two nights of amateur mitt slinging for junior national titles and you have a potpourri of sport that has almost as many things in it as a theatrical boarding mistress' hash.

SURETTE.

THE SIMON pures of the cauliflower brigade launch the week in sport with a hectic two evenings at the Arena, tonight and tomorrow, Canadian and Nova Scotian boxers will vie with boys from Chicago, New York, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Grand Rapids, Detroit as well as from cities and towns throughout New England. The Bay State pins its faith on Henry Surette of Leominster in the heavyweight class.

The featherweight division may furnish the unique sight of seeing brother battle brother for the title. Dan Tarduzzo of Lawrence and his brother, Michael Tarduzzo, of the Jewish Community Center of Washington, both have shown such prowess in the 126-pound class that it would not be surprising if they worked into the finals and fought it out for the title.

Brothers in boxing are not a rarity. Boston has had Mike and Jack Twin Sullivan, Mike and Billy Glover and Joe and Belfield Walcott. Brooklyn had its McGoverns, Terry, Hughie and Philly. San Francisco developed Abe, Caesar and Monte Attell and Jim and Jack Jeffries. New York had Cuspet, Jack and Benny Leon; Leach and Marty Cross, Willie and Charlie Beecher and Benny and Charlie Leonard. Pittsburgh had George and Joe Chip and Jack and Pete Zivic. St. Paul had Mike and Tom Gibbons. Then there were Dave and Spike Sullivan, Montana Dan and Jack Sullivan and a whole flock of others.

In most cases one brother stood out far above the others, but the two Gibbons boys were about on a par in their respective divisions.

WHEN THE Bruin Cubs and the Springfield Indians throw out ball in the fronts in the Boston Garden tomorrow evening it is likely to be the last hockey game of the season. The Bruin Cubs need but one more game to clinch the series for the Fontaine Cup and win the championship of the Canadian American League. But when two such evenly matched and stubborn aggregations as the Bruin Cubs and the Indians get together anything can happen. The series may go even another game. The two "Ice Marathons" the teams already have furnished is sufficient proof of how evenly they are matched and how imbued they are with the "will to win."

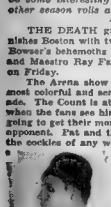
The present series between the two fighting teams of the junior circuit has shown the fans how light the line really is that separates the major hockey league from the minors. The style of play furnished by the Bruin Cubs and the Indians has added impetus to the movement to either form a new hockey league or to give Boston twin teams in the National Hockey League, the same as New York has with the Rangers and the Americans and Montreal has with Les Canadiens and the Maroons.

Although nothing publicly is being announced at this time, it is known that the hockey magnates are mulling over the Boston major league problem and there are likely to be some interesting developments before another season rolls around.

ZARYNOFF

THE DEATH grapple between the two big wrestling trusts furnishes Boston with two great grappling shows this week. As usual Paul Bowser's behemoths will hold forth at the Arena on Thursday evening and Maestro Ray Fabiani's pachyderms will invade the Boston Garden on Friday.

The Arena show will feature Count Zarynoff, who, perhaps, is the most colorful and sensational of all the grunt, groan and grimace brigade. The Count is about the highest and loftiest tumbler of the lot and when the fans see him come tramping onto the mat they know they are going to get their money's worth. The Cossack draws Pat McKay as his opponent. Pat and the Russian should put up a match that will warm the cockles of any wrestling fan's heart.



KIRILENKO

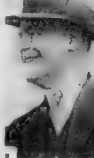
Fabiani also has a "Terrible Cossack" on his card, He is Matteo Kvirikwo, who meets Dick Daviscourt. For his two feature attractions Fabiani is bulling Ray Steele vs. George Hagen and Kvirlenko vs. Daviscourt. The real grand array of talent on the Garden program however should be the grapple between Hans Steinke, the "German Oak" and Rudy Dusek, the Nebraska wildcat. How Fabiani came to make Steinke and Dusek play second fiddle to the other two matches is somewhat a mystery for Steinke long has been recognized as one of the greatest of grapplers.

THE WEEK END will see baseball push hockey off the sports map. The opening of the major league baseball season is just around the corner. Locally the big league season officially starts one week from tomorrow when the Braves will take on Uncle Wilbert Robinson's Dodgers, who, the majority of the baseball experts think, will fight it out with the Cardinals for the National League pennant.

But Boston gets its first 1931 baptism of baseball fire next Saturday when the Braves and the Red Sox will engage in a civil war here at Fenway Park for the benefit of the admiring populace. You'll get your first peek at the Braves and Red Sox of 1931 here at Fenway Park on Saturday.

If you miss seeing the first battle of the post season internecine strike at Fenway Park next Saturday, you can trek to Braves Field for the second battle in the two-game series between the local major league outfits, next Sunday.

BOTH of the local teams have started the Northward trek and will hit the Hub next Friday. Today the Braves play Rocheste in Greensboro, N. C., and the Red Sox tackle Indianapolis at Indianapolis. While the Braves are en route for Washington tomorrow the Red Sox will play Columbus in Columbus. Bruno Collins and his boys will play in Columbus on Wednesday and Thursday. The Braves play the Senators in Washington on Wednesday and take on Baltimore in Baltimore on Thursday.



BOB QUINN

While on baseball it might be mentioned that Bob Quinn, president of the Red Sox, is booming up as compromise candidate to succeed the late E. S. Barnard as president of the American League. Frank Navin, vice-president, may not see his way clear to accept the presidency and New York scribes already are boosting Quinn for the leadership of the Americans.

LOCAL BALL players will be interested to know that the new double decked grandstand which is being erected all along the left and center field sections at Ebbet's Field and which will increase the seating capacity to 40,000 will be completed some time in May.

Hawks Beat Canadiens, 2-1, to Tie Up Series

GOTTSELIG SCORES IN OVERTIME

Chicago, April 6 (AP)—Les Canadiens of Montreal, world hockey champions, and the young Chicago Black Hawks, today were headed for Montreal to resume their battle for possession of the historic Stanley cup. The teams are even after the first two games of the championship series, each having won one.

The Hawks Sunday night squared the series by winning one of the most uproarious hockey matches in the history of the National Hockey League, 2 to 1, after nearly 75 minutes of play, and on a goal that was almost an anticlimax to a brilliant match.

With the score tied at one-all in the second overtime period, Johnny Gottselig, peer of National League stick-handlers, sauntered up the ice, let go at nonchalant George Hainsworth, Montreal goalie, and dropped in the winning score.

George didn't even see the puck and the crowd of 17,736 was silent until it had thoroughly realized what had happened.

RISKO, HEENEY TILT TONIGHT

New York, April 6 (AP)—Boxing fans have little of interest in the way of fights during the current week.

Only one champion is down to defend his crown. Jackie Kid Berg, the scrapping Englishman, gives Billy Wallace of Cleveland a shot at the junior welterweight title Friday night at Detroit. Wallace is considered a real contender for the crown, but Berg's splendid record makes him a favorite.

Those two insatiable shock absorbers, Johnny Risko and old Tom Heeney, are to mix in a 10-rounder at Toronto tonight if nothing interferes.

Max Baer, California's heavyweight pride, boxes tomorrow night at Portland, Ore., against Ernie Owens of Los Angeles. George Manley, Denver light heavyweight meets Jack Delanger, Vancouver, Thursday night at Denver.

A lightweight battle of some importance headed a Friday night card at St. Louis. Billy Petrolle, the Fargo Express, tackling Davy Lope Tesoro, the Filipino, in a 10-rounder. Rusher Graham and Johnny Farr, two leading junior lightweights, clash tonight at Cleveland.

Sirutis, Belloise in "Pure" Title Frays

New York, April 6 (INS)—Because of their consistently successful performances during the past few months, Justin Sirutis, heavyweight, and Mike Belloise, bantamweight, were selected today for the Metropolitan A. A. U. boxing team that will compete in the national amateur championships starting here April 27. Tryouts in the other divisions will begin April 13.

Canzoneri Training

Orangeburg, N. Y., April 6 (INS) Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion, started training here today for his ten-round bout with Jack (Kid) Berg of England at the Chicago Stadium on April 24.

ROCKNE IN DAYS OF HIS YOUTH

Young Knute was a devotee of all sports and an especially ardent tennis devotee. Here you see him in between sets with his arm around an unknown court opponent.

The departed sports hero as a youthful dandy, bow tie, sailor blouse, walking stick and all. The two pretty misses shown with "Rock" in the above photograph are not identified.

Rockne, when he was running middle distance races for Notre Dame. Knute was a good half-miler, but his track deeds were overshadowed by his deeds of football glory.

CHANGES WILL BE SOUGHT IN COURT RULES

George S. Clark, coach of the Quincy high school basketball team, was elected president of the Eastern Massachusetts Board of Approved Basketball Officials at the final meeting of the season at the Boston City Club yesterday.

He succeeds Charles Downe, Arlington high school coach, who retires from office after the most successful season ever enjoyed by any president of the association Downe was given a rising vote of thanks for his untiring efforts in J. W. Kennedy, coach of the Chelsea high school basketball team was elected vice-president, and Edward Kelleher of Cambridge was re-elected secretary-treasurer for the fourth successive term.

The retiring president, Charles Downe, and Edward Kelleher, secretary-treasurer, were elected delegates to the national basketball convention at the Pennsylvania Club in New York on April 9, 10 and 11.

They will submit three changes in the rules as suggested by the members of the local board.

The first is, that a player who has left for four personal fouls, or, for any other disqualification, may re-enter the game twice.

The second is, that when there are two officials in charge of the game, one shall be designated as referee-in-chief.

The third amendment reads that the ball, on all out-of-bound rulings, be immediately delivered to the referee or umpire, who shall award the ball to the player of the proper side.

Twenty-one new members were admitted to the board yesterday as a result of passing the written and floor test submitted by the national committee. The total membership of the association is now 204.

Medford Cue Star Plays Joe Chamaco

Peseches Lyons of Medford will complete his schedule when he plays Joe Chamaco of New Haven this afternoon in the New England three-cushion billiard championship at The State room.

There are but two more games to be played in this tournament, Mills and Chamaco this evening, Morgan Hughes of Worcester and Chamaco in the final contest on Tuesday night.

Browns One Up

Kansas City, Mo., April 6 (INS) —The St. Louis Browns today are one up on the Kansas City Blues as the result of the St. Louis team's 4 to 1 victory.

92-5 Seconds 100 Was Run Up and Down Hill

Bloemfontein, South Africa, April 6 (AP)—Amazed at the record-breaking 100-yard dash of J. Joubert, St. Ellenbosch University athlete, in the South African track and field games Saturday, officials had the track surveyed and discovered it ran uphill for 36 yards and downhill for 70.

Joubert ran the dash in 9-5.5 seconds, beating the recognized world mark of Eddie Tolan, University of Michigan sprinter, by one-tenth of a second.

It was considered probable today that the request for recognition of the mark as a new record would hew thdrawn.

Joubert's time of 9-5.5 seconds ties the American record of Frank Wykoff, which has not yet been recognized by the International American Athletic Federation.

EX-PUPIL IS TO SUCCEED 'ROCK'

Kansas City, April 6 (INS)—A former pupil will succeed Knute Rockne as coach of the Notre Dame football team, according to Dr. D. M. Nigro, president of the Kansas City Notre Dame Club and close personal friend of the dead coach, who returned here today after attending Rockne's funeral at South Bend, Ind.

Those most likely to be considered for the job of head football coach of the "Fighting Irish," in the opinion of Dr. Nigro, are Jimmy Phelan, now head coach at Washington University; Charley Bachman, head mentor at Florida University; Ed "Slip" Madigan, St. Mary's; Adam Walsh, assistant Yale coach, and Charley Dorais, Detroit University.

It is improbable that a successor to "Rock" will be named until the end of the 1931 season, Dr. Nigro said.

Outsider Takes Longchamps Victory

Longchamps, France, April 6 (AP)—A rank outsider, La Savoyarde today won the feature race at the opening of the flat racing season, taking the Prix des Sablons by a length and a half from Lovelace, Chateau Bouscaut was third.

La Savoyarde won 54000 for his owner, Rene Lazard, and paid the nice odds of 6 to 1 in the pari-mutuels.

France Conquers England in Rugby

Paris, April 6 (AP)—France defeated England in an international rugby match today, 14 points to 13. England led at half time, 5 to 4.

Thousands of Poets Among Ball Fans

By THE LIMERICK EDITOR

The Boston Evening American's record-breaking Limerick Contest will be resumed on Wednesday and will end on Saturday of this week.

The final four tests will be for tickets for the opening American League series of four games between the Red Sox and New York Yankees at Fenway Park from Wednesday to Saturday, April 22-25.

Twelve grandstand seats will be awarded for each contest; four to the winner of the first prize, two to the winner of the second prize and one each to the contributors of the next six best limericks.

The Limerick editor has already received thousands of answers to each of the four limericks printed last week for tickets for the Braves-Robins' series at Braves Field, starting a week from tomorrow.

Don't Forget to Sign Your Answers

Most of the contestants have lived up to all the rules, but we are still receiving answers that bear neither names nor addresses.

So we will remind everybody again that whether or not your name and address is on the outside of the envelope, it must be written plainly on an enclosed slip of paper as well.

Winners of First Test to Be Announced Thursday

All answers to the first limerick on Wally Berger, which appeared last Wednesday, must reach the editor not later than midnight tomorrow to receive any consideration. The one received before closing time, however, will have as good a chance of being adjudged the best as the first to reach us. So there is still time for you to try to win tickets for the opening game of the season.

The winners of the first test will be announced and the tickets mailed to them on Thursday.

Address your letters to the Limerick Editor, Boston Evening American, Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass.

And don't forget, if you prefer writing a complete limerick about any of the Braves, Red Sox, Yankees or Robins to filling in the last lines of those appearing in the paper it is perfectly o. k. Your efforts will receive every consideration and you will stand as good a chance of winning as the next one.

The contest is open to every man, woman and child in New England, with the exception of employes of the Boston Evening American, their families and relatives.

Indians Can't Hit

New Orleans, April 6 (AP)—A habit of failing to hit when hits mean runs has become conspicuous on the part of the Cleveland Indians the last two weeks and is beginning to worry their followers.

GAR WOOD OUT TO BEAT SPEED BOAT RECORD

Miami Beach Fla., April 6 (AP) —Gar Wood turned today to the task of tuning the motors of his Miss America IX for an attempt to bring back the world's speedboat record to America.

Wood arrived here Sunday from New York and went immediately to his home on Indian Creek where he will prepare his craft for the assault on the mark of 10349 miles an hour, established by Kaye Don of England at Buenos Aires last week.

The Detroit manufacturer said he would go over the Miss America IX point by point and check every detail before he makes his trial for the record. He did not say when he expected to have the boat ready for its run.

LEGION TO HOLD PIN TOURNEY

On April 23, 24 and 25 the American Legion will hold its first annual candle pin tournament at the Boston Recreation Alleys, 613 Washington st., Boston.

Archie Walsh, representing the Mattapan Post, will be the Legion's foremost star, and is expected to set some new records while striving to take the honors for his post. Suffolk County's 20-team league will be 100 per cent entered as well as the 14 teams from the Essex county league. Lawrence, Haverhill, Portland, Lewiston and Springfield have promised to send along their best outfits.

It will be a three-day tournament, with N. E. B. A. rules governing.

Governor Ely and Mayor Curley have already donated cups for prizes and many others are expected.

Harvard Houses May Have Sports Boards

An athletic committee in each house, under the new house plan at Harvard, to handle athletic activities between the various houses, may be formed if a report submitted to the Student council is found to be satisfactory.

Under the new scheme all inter-house athletics will be handled by a close knit organization, and it is believed that a greater interest in sports activities will be shown under the proposed plan.

It is planned to have the new committees draw up definite schedules for all inter-house contests, to determine captaincies and make other awards, and consider the athletic policies of each house.

IRISH COACH FELT DOOM IMPENDING

This is the fourth instalment of the thrilling and impressive life story of Knute Rockne, the world's most famous football coach, who was killed in an airplane crash. It is written by Warren Brown, noted sports writer of the Chicago Herald-Examiner and lifelong personal friend of Rockne. Mr. Brown's interesting narrative will continue daily until he has unfolded his brilliant portrayal of Rockne and his achievements.

By WARREN BROWN

CHAPTER 4

Some mention has been made, from time to time, of Knute Rockne's superstitions.

His players who have invaded the "plains" at West Point, recall that they were always required to use the waiters' entrance.

It is a known fact that Rockne and his teams, while in Chicago, invariably stopped at the Auditorium Hotel, on the lake front. It is a matter of record that no Notre Dame team in the Rockne era ever lost a game in Chicago.

That is one phase of the Rockne superstitions. That he was not wholly superstitious, I am prepared to prove. If he had been, it is improbable that he would have departed on the fatal journey to the Pacific Coast, much as he liked that great section, and its residents.

For Rockne recognized the fact, coincidental or not, that each successive visit was accompanied by trouble.

The evening before he left the office of the Herald and Examiner, to catch the train for Kansas City, and begin the air journey that ended in tragedy, Rockne himself brought up this subject.

"Well," he said, "I wonder what will happen this time?"

Trouble Begins

As far back as the appearance of the "Four Horsemen" at Pasadena, in the New Year's game of 1925, events transpired that left Rockne many unhappy moments in the game with Stanford was a thrilling spectacle. And although it was won by Notre Dame, 27 to 10, the gruelling contest took its toll. Within a day after it, Jimmy Crowley, one of the "Horsemen," was stricken from the play collapsed, and for a time his life hung in the balance.

This in itself was disaster enough, but when one of the frequent newspaper controversies broke out over something that had been said—or hadn't been said, as it later developed—over the Stanford style of play, there was trouble enough for a team of Rockne's.

On a subsequent trip to Los Angeles, his alma mater, the University of Southern California was his objective, Rockne stopped over with the team at Tucson.

He was host, as he has always been, to sporting writers, and permitted them the freedom of the practice field.

Some of them, considering it their duty, as they brought back and published details of the game and defense that were supposed to have been held secret.

Rockne never forgot that incident. He forgave it, years later, and often used it as the basis of some of his humorous stories, in Los Angeles, no later than the recent visit.

But at the time, and for a long while thereafter, he was wary of newspapermen who looked too much like investigators or "scouts."

Son Near Death

On another trip, little Jack, one of Rockne's sons, was left at home in South Bend, and even as the game with Southern California was being played, the youngster was engaged in a fight for his life from complications that had set in after the lodging of a peanut shell in his throat.

Little Jack, the last of the Rockne's to put up a fight that was worthy of his sire, and upon through to recovery.

Nevertheless the anxious moments were never forgotten.

It was on the way to Los Angeles last, the feeling of that Rockne first called my attention to the series of ill-fated happenings.

He wondered then, what was going to happen, on that trip.

At the moment, when he became convinced that his regular fullback Larry Mullins, would be unable to play, it seemed that enough had happened to tie that trip up with the others, and their misfortunes.

War on Coast

But when Rockne reached Los Angeles he was cast into the midst of a Pacific coast conference

GAINOR KEEPS DOCTORS WORKING OVERTIME

BRUIN STAR'S UPKEEP IS BIG ITEM

This is the sixth in a series by Bill Grimes, Boston Evening American sports writer, on thrilling experiences of ten stars. In today's article Grimes tells of "Dutch" Gainor of the Boston Bruins.

By BILL GRIMES
CHAPTER 6

When President C. F. Adams of the Bruins learned that Manager Art Ross had signed J. Norman "Dutch" Gainor little did he realize that the initial cost for this western star was going to overshadowed by the upkeep.

Dutch Gainor came out of the western section of Canada with a great reputation as a defense man. But, he made such a favorable impression upon Art Ross that he was immediately assigned to the forward line.

Gainor is in a class by himself, at worming his way through a defense. He has the most deceptive shift in hockey. To make a defense man, Dutch has appeared to be skating one way and going another. He has made the best of them look foolish and the regular ones, such as Ching Johnson of the Rangers and Reg Noble of the Falcons frankly admit that they fear Gainor more than any forward in the league, when the Dutchman is right.

"Dutch" Takes Plenty of Punishment

It is almost impossible to get the puck away from him by a poke or sweep check and therefore the defense men are ordered to step into him and the harder he is hit the better satisfied are the managers.

Gainor takes his punishment like a man. He has never complained and never attempted to retaliate for a foul by other than the prescribed methods. Thousands of fans who saw Dutch checked by Butch Boucher in the Bruin-Maroon game in the play offs last season thought that Ganior had been fouled.

Dutch took all the blame on himself for the injury which sent him to the hospital for an immediate operation. He stated that he had not allowed sufficient area to avoid Boucher in the event of the Maroon reversing after being faked out of position and that, according to Gainor, was just what happened.

After his first season with the Bruins, Dutch Gainor entered a local hospital and submitted to a series of operations. He had been troubled by a deformed toe on each foot. These were broken and straightened.

Then he was advised to have his tonsils and adenoids removed, which he agreed to, with the result that he delayed his homeward journey two weeks and was forced to make the long trip to Calgary alone.

Gainor Spends Most of His Time With Doctors

During his second season with the Bruins he was butted in the mouth and lost many teeth. For weeks he was a daily attendant of Dr. Stewart and wound up with almost a complete new set of upper and lower teeth.

Early last fall, Dutch Gainor began a long treatment with Dr. J. M. Shortell, for various reasons. He had been bothered for years and his condition was serious, if he was to remain in hockey.

He went through and came out a new man, only to get chopped on the shoe during a game with the Rangers, having his toe broken. This forced him to remain out of the lineup for two weeks.

Since he joined the Bruins, Dutch Gainor has been almost completely overhauled from top to bottom. Old parts have been replaced as some cases and poorly functioning once rectified.

And, the bills were all addressed to C. F. Adams.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

Short shots around the green will be more accurate for you when you make them without body action.

There are various factors that operate to spill these efforts, such as looking up, acting too hastily, over-anxiety and such things, but the stealthiest fault is introducing, or permitting too much loosenness in the body while stroking for the short pitch or pitch and run. Take aim at a pitch of 50 yards, with open face to the green. With mashie or mashie-niblick, address with your hands close to your left leg—just barely missing it. Fix your right elbow close to the hip, but not actually touching. Shove the blade back along the ground, with your left arm. Make the left elbow barely miss your stomach as it moves across. Meantime the right elbow stays where you put it at the outset.

CARNERA TO BE REINSTATED IN NEW YORK

New York, April 6 (INS)—That Primo Carnera is to be reinstated by the New York Boxing Commission and put back into circulation as one of the things worth seeing in New York became apparent today.

Al Singer's singing with Leon See, the chief manager of Carnera, was taken as the tip-off.

Singer is about to stage a comeback and if he did not know that Mons. See would soon be restored to good standing with Carnera, the former lightweight king would never have signed with See.

Right now Singer's Coaster and See are reinstated Singer will be as busy as a dead canary for he can't fight in New York. Outside of New York there are a few places he can legally exhibit himself but except in this great city the former champion is rated somewhat of a cheese and his drawing power something like that of a Swiss bell ringer.

Trouble Followed on Rockne's Trips West

controversy, raging around one of his old boys, Jimmy Phelan, now coach of Washington, and Howard Jones, coach of Southern California.

There had been charges and counter charges that Washington's team had rough housed Southern California, in a game just before the arrival of Notre Dame. Jones, on radio broadcasts was quite indignant about it all.

The story was told and retold, and, as stories will, grew out of all proportions in the telling.

When Rockne reached Los Angeles, the substance of the story that was first told him, was no less than sensational.

Without attempting to weigh its merits, though most of it. I am sure was ridiculous—it seems proper to tell it here, that its effect upon Rockne can best be judged.

He was told, and I was in the audience, that Jones had charged Phelan with coaching his team in rough tactics, with a view towards weakening Southern California for the Notre Dame game, Phelan being, of course, a Notre Dame man. It was told that Jones had recalled a game with St. Mary's, coached by Ed ("Slip") Madigan, another Notre Dame man, that had also interfered with the health and happiness of the Trojans, and he was told, finally, that Jones was intimating that this procedure was a part of the Notre Dame system, and that agitation should be started to put Phelan and Madigan in their places.

Rockne in Rage

For the first and last time in his life, I saw Rockne in a rage.

He sent for Phelan, and got his version. He talked somewhat, then. He was scheduled to speak at a Southern California dinner that night and he left his hotel determined to have a showdown with Jones, going so far as to say that if there was an element of truth in the reports of what Jones had said, relations between Notre Dame and Southern California were at an end.

What transpired between Rockne and Jones, I do not know.

Certainly there was no heated argument between them, for Phelan and I were close enough to have been attracted by any undue vocal gymnastics.

That the whole affair was a tempest in a teapot seems obvious, for when the Coast Conference met a day or two later, Jones and Phelan not only shook hands, but games between Southern California and Washington, and even Southern California and St. Mary's were arranged, without any great debate.

Whatever the merits of the coast's controversy, the fact remains that it supplied, on the very first day of his arrival in Los Angeles, the answer to Rockne's question:

"I wonder what's going to happen this trip?"

More Trouble

Rockne went back to the coast in February of this year, I was there at the time, and knowing that he was coming, began to wonder what the fates might spin this time.

Newspapermen, or many of them, had difficulty in finding Rockne, the day of his arrival, though he had been at various places throughout the day.

And then broke loose that story concerning a possible suit against him for an accounting of money advanced for the importing of an All Star Notre Dame team to Los Angeles for a charity football game, a few weeks previous.

Rockne was disturbed by that story, though it collapsed in short order.

He had reached a point, he told them, in which he had about decided he had enough of that part of the country, much as he liked it.

"If I could come out here, once, just once," he said, "and not have something happen, I'd like to reconsider. But maybe I'd better stick to arranging games with Bill Ingram at California, or with "Pop" Warner at Stanford, and try my luck up there."

As far as I know, Rockne had reached a tentative agreement with Ingram for a home and home series with California, beginning in the fall of 1932.

We were talking, just before his departure on his last journey, Rockne discussed that situation, at length.

"There are some matters that have to be arranged," he said, "but I'm meeting Bill (Ingram) in Los Angeles, and we'll probably straighten it all out."

Rockne twirled the inevitable cigar between thumb and forefinger in silence for a moment.

"Of course," he concluded, "we'll talk about that, if I'm not being sued, or something else. I wonder what it will be, this time?"

Superstition? No. Premonition, I wonder.

INDIANS AND CUBS SET RECORDS

With one, and possibly two games to be played for the Henri Fontaine Cup, emblematic of the Canadian-American League championship, the Bruin Cubs and the Springfield Indians have established three new world records.

And, in the event of a Springfield victory tomorrow night at the Boston Garden, another record will be set up.

Although the Cubs and the Indians have engaged in five contests for the honor of succeeding the Rhode Island Reds as the holders of the Fontaine Cup, the count stands, Cubs 2, Springfield 1. In the opening game in Springfield the teams battled for 190 minutes to a 2 to 2 tie and in the fifth contest they were deadlocked one all when the minions of the law called a halt at midnight, after 110 minutes of play.

It has required no less than 450 minutes for the Cubs and Indians to play five games, an average of 30 minutes of overtime for each contest. This is a high water mark for championship competition, while the 100 minutes of overtime play in the first game of course is admitted as a new world record by the best posted authorities.

Record for Minor League Attendance Is Set

The other new mark set up by the Cubs and Indians is one for total attendance for a minor league playoff, the clubs having played to approximately 49,600 in five games and in all probability these minute will be increased some 15,000 tomorrow night at the Garden.

Through their performance in this year's playoff both against Providence and Springfield, Manager Eddie Powers and his players have assured the future of the Bruin Cubs.

Granted that neither Providence nor Springfield were at top strength at the start of the playoffs, a club which had been tore and again hopelessly beaten by the Reds and the Indians to come through is a wonderful tribute to the management and the fighting spirit of the players.

There are better clubs in minor league hockey, and one of them is the Springfield Indians, but there is no gamer aggregation than the Cubs.

Eddie Powers has the happy faculty of instilling fight in his players.

Renny Grant and Paul Runge have been stand outs during the Springfield series. Few goalies, even National leaguers, could have improved on Grant's performances in the Cubs' net.

Grant Has Played Fine Game at Goal

Contrary to a somewhat general opinion Grant's work has not the best defense out in front of him. True, Jack Pratt and Yip Foster can afford arguments, who sees head on into them but they are too easily faked out of position to make Renny Grant's berth a bed of roses.

However, Grant has received some effective support from his fast checking forwards, such as Yank Boyd, Deed Islein, Bob Taylor, Bill Smoke Stanis, and the poke and sweep-checking of Eddie Burke has helped materially.

Grant has been left on his own far too frequently and but for his sensational work, the Cubs would long since have departed for their respective homes.

Paul Runge has outdone himself in the playoffs. He flashed during the closing weeks of the regular season, after a slow and somewhat colorless start.

Of the 14 goals scored by the Bruin Cubs against Springfield, Runge has been responsible for five. He has been worked with the second line and therefore has not served as much time as the regulars, but he has scored just one-third of the total number of goals credited to the entire team. He has also been credited with two assists and so has been a most valuable asset to Manager Eddie Powers and the Bruin Cubs.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

"Paul Bowser," said Mr. Boston today, "realizes that the future popularity of wrestling depends upon the youngsters of today. He has invited 200 boys from the Burroughs Newsboys Foundation at 16 Somerset st., and from the Salvation Newsboys Association, Salem, to attend the finish wrestling match between Count Zarynoff and Pat McKay at the Arena on Thursday night.

"Bowser says the youngsters have been anxious to see the colorful Zarynoff in action.

"All major sports need the good will of the boys of today.

"Baseball realizes this now more than ever. We find our big league clubs giving attention to organizing amateur and semipro leagues. Judge Landis decided to help create new interest in baseball when the boys turned from baseball to golf.

"Wrestling has become a popular pastime because these persons who direct the mat game have the intelligence to do everything possible to arouse new interest in the sport.

"The Somerberg influence attracted the college element, and with it came the ladies. I took a peek at the ringside sections and the boxes at the Arena the other night when Ed George defended his title against Nick Latze. There were hundreds of ladies in attendance. It looked like an opening night of a new show.

"The ladies have gone for wrestling, much like they have for hockey. Friend husband and the boy friend no longer have to ask for a night off so that they can attend a wrestling match. The sparring partner goes right along.

"Bowser was looking to the future when he invited the youngsters to see Zarynoff battle McKay and Nick Latze clash with Jack Wagner. One must look ahead in sport as in everything else."

Leo Larivee Looks Like the Real Thing

Eddie Mack calls Mr. Boston's attention to the fact he has signed Leo Larivee, Waterbury middleweight, to meet Dave Shade of California in a ten-round bout at the Arena a week from tomorrow night.

"Larivee, a youngster of 19, is one of the bright spots in the middleweight division," stated Mr. Boston. "Larivee has shown twice in this city and on each occasion he looked like a first class scrapper. In his first engagement he met Earl Arbeau Odonne Plazza, while in his second tussle he stopped Vittorio Livan.

"Larivee is an aggressive, two handed battler and has the color that appeals to the fans. He will receive the acid test when he mingles with Shade who has been tried in the fistic wars.

"Mack has also billed Johnny Indriano to mingle with Bucky Lawless of Syracuse in another ten. Indriano is one of the most finished boxers in the game and would have won a championship by this time if it had not been for a series of bad breaks.

"Indriano licked Joe Dundee in an overweight match when the latter was a welterweight champion. He also bested Tommy Freeman before the latter accepted the throne in the welterweight division.

Mello to Point for Bout With Brouillard

"I hear that Al Mello will take a few minor matches in out-of-town rings before meeting Lou Brouillard for the Garden.

"Al Morro, Johnny Buckley's new heavyweight, defeated Tony Stabinean, Armand Emanuel and Hans Birkis in bouts on the coast. He is said to Lea Kennedy.

"Billy Ames has been trying to match Ernie Schaaf with Jim Maloney for a show in May."

Three Young Pirates Walk the Plank

Reno, Nev., April 6 (AP)—Just as the Pirate brig set out for the East today, Jewel Ens, the head man, tossed three young members of his crew overboard. Bivin, Johnson and Kennedy, right-handed hurler, were farmed to Wichita.

YANKS, CARDS PICKED TO WIN FLAGS

By JOE CASHMAN

Baseball says "Hello" to Boston this week.

The Red Sox and Braves, local big league representatives, arrive home on Friday after almost two months of preliminary training in the Southland and open a two-game city series on the following day.

Saturday's contest will be staged at Fenway Park and on Sunday the rivals will move to Braves Field.

The regular season will begin a week from tomorrow with the Braves prying off the lid locally against the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Red Sox meeting the Yankees in New York.

The consensus among the baseball writers of the country as the races are about to begin is that Washington and Brooklyn will be the world's series rivals next fall, that the Braves will finish sixth and that the Red Sox end up in the cellar once more.

For instance, Bill Corum, New York Journal expert, picks Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Chicago and Boston to finish in that order in the American League and Brooklyn, St. Louis, New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Boston, Philadelphia and Cincinnati to end up as named in the National League.

Cashman Keeps Local Clubs Out of Cellar

Your correspondent doesn't often do any prognosticating but since everybody appears to be doing it now, here's how we dope the races:

AMERICAN	NATIONAL
New York	St. Louis
Washington	Brooklyn
Philadelphia	Chicago
Cleveland	New York
Detroit	Boston
Chicago	Pittsburgh
Boston	Philadelphia
St. Louis	Cincinnati

Each Hub club will introduce several new faces to the fans when it takes the field this week-end. These highly-touted rookies may fade out of the picture soon after the campaign starts but according to training camp reports they will last the distance and make the native cities stronger than for several seasons.

The Braves will present three new infielders, three new outfielders, two new pitchers and two new catchers.

The Sox have three new outfielders, three new infielders, two new pitchers and one new catcher.

The Tribe will start four of the newcomers, Earl Averill at first base, Charlie Wilson at third base, Red Worthington in right field and Wes Schulmerich in left field. And the chances are that Regis Lebeny and Bill McAfee, latest additions to the Waterman pitching staff, Whitey Dreesen, rookie infielder, and Al Bool, catcher secured from the Pirates, will see some action against the Sox.

Red Sox Starting Lineup Undecided

John Collins of the Fenway flock is almost as undecided today as to his starting lineup as he was when practice started.

It is certain that "Shono's" most highly-prized rookie, Gene Rye, will not be able to play at the start. The slugging outfielder broke his wrist during the first week of spring training, won't be ready to take his place in the field before his cast is removed.

Long Tom Winsett, who had a brief trial with the team last spring, is expected to open in left-field.

Street Predicts Great Season for Braves

Atlanta, Ga., April 6 (AP)—Gabby Street, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, put the boys on notice today that the Boston Braves would bear watching this season.

Street, here with his team for an exhibition game today with Atlanta, of the Southern Association, says Boston "will cause a lot of record-holders to lose more games than they well can spare.

"Bill McKechnie is one of the greatest managers in the game," Gabby said. "He can get the most out of a team and he has plenty of good material, who broke their way even finish above the .500 mark."

Street named Chicago, Pittsburgh, Brooklyn, New York and St. Louis as the five clubs liable to be in the first division by September. He personally fears Pittsburgh.

"The Pirates will be very dangerous if they are able to go through the season with anything like full strength," he added.

Gabby said the Giants were good and with plenty of reserve strength and that Hornsby would have the Cubs well up in the fight.

"The race in the National is going to be so fast all season that reserve strength will be needed in large quantities by clubs anxious to win the flag," he said.

Gabby talked about the other clubs today, but you can mark it down he's sure his Cards will leap over the last hurdle near top position.

'PURES' SEEK TITLES

JUNIOR BOUTS AT ARENA TONIGHT

By RINGSIDE

One hundred and fifty of the leading amateur boxers in the United States and Canada will clash in the junior national championships which will be held tonight and tomorrow night at the Arena under the direction of the New England A. A. A. U.

Sturdy mitt wielders from Nova Scotia and Montreal will try to turn back Uncle Sam's standard bearers.

There will be contests in the eight championship classes. The trial bouts will be run off tonight, while semi-finals and final finals will take place tomorrow evening.

District champions are here from as far West as Chicago. These boys have won their spurs in various amateur tournaments and will make a strong bid for honors tonight.

Fine Array of Local Boxers Entered

Boston and New England will be represented by a fine array of youthful boxers.

Amateur boxing has had a big year in the Hub. Many new boys have been brought to the front. The best of them will step to bat in the junior tournament in an effort to turn back the youngsters from Montreal, Nova Scotia and the various A. A. U. associations.

STARS ENTER ROAD RACES

The 12th annual Michael J. O'Connell Post, American Legion, 10-mile handicap road race will take place, as usual, the morning of April 20. It will start from in front of the Lowell school on Center st. and will follow a course through the park system and finish at the starting point.

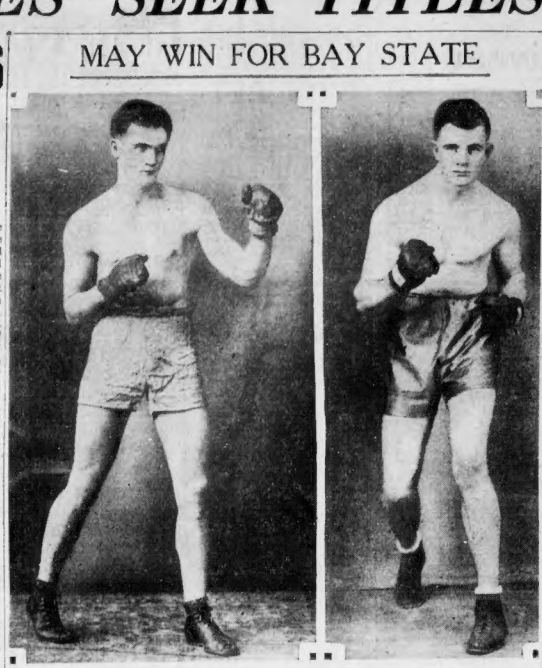
The Meadowbrook A. C. of Philadelphia has asked for entry blanks, which indicates that there may be some foreign talent in the race even though it is American Marathon day.

Ten prizes will be given for the contest, plus a special time prize. Councilor Peter J. Murray has donated a special prize to be given to the first Jamaica Plain resident to finish. "Brick" O'Hare, former English High and Boston University athlete, athletic officer of the post, is handling the contest.

47 Entries for Annual Cathedral Road Race

Forty-seven entries were received over the week-end for the annual 10-mile road race of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. next Saturday afternoon. Among these were 34 from the Dorchester Club, headed by William Zepp, national junior 10-mile champion, who last year won the time prize. Other Dorchester runners are Mike Adelche, Albert Baer, William Benedict, Alfred Brand, Arthur Beck, Leonard Chisholm, Edward Coghlan, George Costarakis, Al Frayling, Al Francis, minute match.

MAY WIN FOR BAY STATE



MICKY BISHOP GORDON HATHAWAY

SEEK MIDDLEWEIGHT HONORS

Boston has two promising entrants in the middleweight class in the national junior boxing championship in the Arena, tonight. MICKY BISHOP, of Stoughton, you see at the left and GORDON HATHAWAY, of Wollaston, is on the right. It wouldn't be surprising to see one of these two 160-pounders win the middleweight championship for the Bay State.

FINISH MATCHES AT GARDEN

There will be two finish wrestling matches at the Boston Garden on Friday night under the direction of Ray Fabiani. In one tussle, Matros Kirilenko, Russian heavyweight, will clash with Dick Daviscourt of California, while in another Ray Steele, also of California, will have George Hagen of Brooklyn as an opponent.

It will be Steele's first appearance at the Garden. Ray is rated as one of the best of the big fellows and has been made a choice to win from Hagen.

Kirilenko and Daviscourt have already shown in Fabiani mat carnivals. These big fellows are expected to furnish action.

Hans Steinke, German heavyweight, will collide with Rudy Dusek of Little Rock, Ark. in a 30-

Scoring Record Set by Fall River Star

New York, April 6—Fall River's champion soccer team, which will represent New York after the series under the name of the New York Yankees, gained the first leg of another national championship by defeating the Bricklayers of Chicago, 6 to 2, in the first of the grand finals for the national challenge cup at the Polo Grounds.

The next game will be played at Mills Stadium, Chicago, next Sunday.

Bert Patenaude, flashy French-American-born center forward, hung up a record in national cup history by getting five goals in a row for Fall River. McPherson tallied the other just prior to the final whistle.

Fall River led at half time, 3 to 0, but on the run of the play was not justified to be three goals in front.

Within 10 minutes of the resumption the western champions had cut down the margin by two goals

Harvard Trackmen Drill for Penn Games

Harvard's track forces will this afternoon start their real drive toward the Penn relay carnival at Philadelphia late this month. Vernon Munroe and Penrose Hallowell, injured Harvard aces, are expected to be in shape for the Penn races, and the Crimson should finish well up in both the mile and two-mile

AT THE LISTENING POST

FOR OVER A YEAR it has been our pleasure to say "Good Morning New England" at 7:30 a. m. and to then proceed with the brand new news of each new day. Now that WLEX is moving over to Squantum, there is a brief lull in the procedure, perhaps ten days or two weeks. While we won't have to rise and shine so early, just the same we will miss starting our labors in this manner. We have often wondered just how many folks listened to what was offered, so maybe the temporary suspension will afford the opportunity to learn if we are missed by Listening Posters.

WE DID THINK for a time that the insistence of Maurice Chevalier that he not be regarded as a "ladies man" was more or less a matter of showmanship on his part. After reading his article "Thank you America" in the current issue of Radio Digest our opinion is vastly different. He is genuinely grateful for America's reception of his talents—and expresses himself in rather modest and commendable phrases.

ONE INSTRUMENT that is always welcome on the air is the harp. A melodious effect that is truly rare results with the plucking of harp strings in a studio, yet very little harp music is heard. Perhaps it is due tothe fact that there are comparatively few good harpists.

NAMES IS NAMES: Lestrice Joy (that's her real name, too,) heard on the R. K. O. program Saturday night (WBZ) is always smiling. This movie star is filling a week's stage engagement in Boston this week.

RUMBLINGS of a Radio Beauty Contest, national in scope, are being heard as gossip pertaining to the first great television effort to be staged by the chains.

ATMOSPHERIC conditions made it necessary to break off the program coming from Managua, stricken city of Nicaragua, on Friday night (WBZ). A description of the havoc wrought by the earthquake in that country was to have come through, but it was necessary to replace the broadcast with an NBC studio offering.

NICK LUCAS, the popular crooning troubador, was heard today at 11:30 this morning (WBZ) and did his bit well—as usual.

SERVICES FOR Knute Rockne were impressive and soul stirring as heard through WNAC at 4 p. m. Saturday. Nothing elaborate, since Rockne himself was a plain man, great in every sense of the word, as great as the love with which all America shall enshrine his memory.

Features on Air

COMING OUT OF THE ETHER . . . Al Moffat, commodore of the Boston division of Sea Scouts will be guest speaker on the Bond program, WEEI at 7:15 tonight . . . The ambitious Nick Lucas, not content with a four-a-day at the Metropolitan theater, is heard on clef air twice today. From WBZA at 11:30 a. m. the "crooning troubadour" will do a turn before the mike, and once again from WLOE at 6:30 he will offer bits from his repertoire . . . Mayor Curley speaks on "One Way to Help People in Your City" on WNAC at 4:15 today . . . In observance of Army Day, Generals Harbord and Delafield will speak, and music will be furnished by the U. S. Army band in a special b'dcast from WEEI at 10:30 tonight . . . Rudy Weidhoft, who taught B. Valles to play the saxophone but not to croon, will be heard over WBZA at 8:30 tonight . . . Plans to aid in reducing the number of traffic accidents will be discussed by Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, o'er WEEI at 9:30 this eve.

Personal Bits

In one month CBS averages 178 programs b'dcast from 24 cities outside N. Y. . . . AMOS 'n' ANDY never rehearse their script, nor do they ever enter the studio to b'dcast until their theme song is almost completed. Incidentally, the boys write the introduction and closing as well as the continuity. Andy is the typist . . . EMERY DEUTSCH and orch. are on a concert tour . . . The March of Time program requires 11 hrs.' rehearsal . . . PEGGY GOLDNER, harpist for CBS, gave her first recital before Emperor Frans Josef of Austria when she was only 12 yrs. old. Miss Goldner is the only woman in the N. Y. Philharmonic orch. . . . The Dutch Masters program requires 2000 pages of manuscript a week . . . JOLLY BILL and JANE celebrate their 3d anniversary on the air this a. m. They estimate they have uttered 1,650,000 words in 1000 air performances during the three yrs. . . . It sounds wrong, but NBC vouches for it; that BRUCE KAMMEN, who took the leading part in the radio playlet, "Uncle Adam and Little Eva," two yrs. ago, is still getting fan mail on that program . . . BARBARA MAUREL, CBS contralto and French born, made her American debut with the Boston Opera Company . . . MYSTERIOUS WAYE—By Percival Christopher Wren

SYNOPSIS: Dr. Charters would like to "remove" John Waye, thereby ending the trouble he has caused in the nursing home. But when the clever Waye, in Charters' hearing, is declared by Dr. Studley to be healthy and not likely to die suddenly, the probability of his inexplicable "removal" by Dr. MacAdoo's poison lessens. Because Waye knows of Charters' past crimes, has wrenched from him an alibi for the murder of "Spider Schlitz, and says he will remain until the hanging of the man whose name he has signed to the murder confession. Charters tells MacAdoo that he has changed his mind about collecting the amount promised should Marjorie Lauderdell, a patient, not get well. Incensed at the prospect of losing his share through the guile of Waye, MacAdoo tells Mr. James that Charters, their superior, is "playing his own game."

CHAPTER 18

A Divided Monastery

THE COLD, fish-like eyes of Mr. James bored into the brown, long-lashed orbs of Dr. MacAdoo.

"How come?" he growled at him.

"Well, it's clear enough to me, and I think it is to you—and to Fanny and Louie—that this Waye guy has got the bulge on the Boss and that the Boss is—I won't say double-crossing us—not telling us everything. And he's weakening, too. For he's said it himself in "is Lauderdell business."

"What's that?" asked Mr. James.

"You know. Marjorie Lauderdell, the pretty girl in number 33."

"Sure. I know the girl, all right, all right. What's her complaint?"

"A hundred thousand pounds."

Mr. James sat upright. If his eyes did not brighten, they hardened a little, and opened considerably.

"Suffering from half-a-million bucks! What's the cure?"

Dr. MacAdoo laughed unpleasantly.

"I know there's arsenic in the prescription," he observed, as he looked down and polished a fingernail.

"High fee for complete cure?"

"Ten thousand pounds sterling."

"Who scoops?"

"The Boss."

"How come that you know this, and I don't?"

"Ah!" smiled Dr. MacAdoo malevolently, "that's what I'm telling you, The Doctor . . . I don't say he's double-crossing us, mind you . . . wasn't going to let us in on it, at all. He was going . . ."

"Who did tell you, if the Boss didn't?" interrupted Mr. James.

"The stranger within our gates, my dear Jimmy," said Dr. MacAdoo with nervous jauntiness.

Mr. James sprang to his feet, and the Doctor flinched.

Waye Told

"What!" he shouted. "That eternal Waye guy? He told you?"

"He did. . . . And I went straight to the Boss and tackled him about it," continued Dr. MacAdoo with a ring of righteous indignation in his voice.

Mr. James emerged, still gasping, from the depths of profound amazement, bewilderment and thought.

"What did the Old Man do when you showed your hand and called his bluff?"

"Promised to go fifty-fifty with me," boasted Dr. MacAdoo proudly.

"Gee!" sneezed Mr. James. "He's certainly weakening."

"Weakening! I'll tell the world. He's weakening so much that he's throwing up the case," chattered Dr. MacAdoo.

"He sent for me on purpose to tell me that he's actually giving away the 10,000—and 5000 of 'em mine at that."

"So?" mused Mr. Jones.

"Give any reason?" he inquired. "He's rattled. This cursed Waye has . . ."

"Hell!" interrupted Mr. James suddenly. "Where does Waye connect up with Marjorie Lauderdell?"

"Search me," sighed the Doctor. "But I guess you know now what I mean when I say the Boss is double-crossing and losing his nerve."

Sweet Voice

Dr. Charters, next morning, head on hand, with pursed lips and coldly speculative eye, sat and thoughtfully considered the face of Mr. James, who, having purged his bosom of complaint, also sat—and stared at his partner and chief, with his usual expression of sour and resentful, contemptuous and menacing, animosity.

"Now, look here, Jimmy," said the Doctor with the voice of sweet reasonableness, "Who is running this show, you or I? Whose are the brains of this little business? How have we made the real fine success that we have of this business—safe and paying, solid, and respectable? By brains and team work. I've found the brains and got the right team together—Manuel, Fanny, Louie and you. And Studley, Sister Weldon, the nurses and the rest, all the genuine, gilt-edged, hallmarked article . . ."

"Now we can only carry on by perfect teamwork, trust and confidence, honesty, and straightforwardness, I . . ."

"Where's the trust and confidence, honesty, and straightforwardness?" interrupted Mr. James. "Where's the honesty in trying to make 10,000 pounds on the side? Looks more like a low swindle, if you ask me. Perfect mutual trust!" and Mr. James appeared to be about to spit.

"Aren't we on plain business basis?" he continued. "With everything in the pool and an agreed share-out of the profits all signed and accepted . . . Honesty and straightforwardness! And when Monsel gets wise to your little game, you call it off—or pretend to! You make me sick in my stomach."

"Now, look her, Jimmy," replied the Doctor, still speaking patiently. "Do you know why all crook-syndicates, except our own, crash, sooner or later? . . . Because crooks don't trust each other . . . They quarrel sooner or later—and a house divided cannot stand . . . Not even Monastery House . . ."

They're United

"Why do the police beat the crook gangs in the long run? Because they're united. When it puts crooks in jail? Their brother crooks. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, where there's a crook gang, there's a weakling, or a grumbler who knows better than the leader. . . ."

"Or a dirty double-crosser," interrupted Mr. James, with an angry sneer.

"Quite so. Now unless we want to go the way of most such—er—syndicates, we must have faith, trust, unity and discipline."

"Quite so," mocked Mr. James. "And what's the bearing of all this on the Lauderdell business? Spill the story."

"I will—to show you you're being a snarling cur, and because we can't afford to have these dangerous—er—suspicions, that may lead to quarrels and ruin."

Nothing to Eat

Except Water

Appearances are deceptive. Life today is outwardly the same as two years ago, when all were prosperous and most were rich—on paper. Yet today one out of every ten Americans wonders where his next meal is coming from. Six million breadwinners are unemployed, and counting in their dependents, fully twenty million men, women and children—one-tenth of the population—are living from hand to mouth.

How much longer can this go on?

Here is a report from the Family Welfare Association of America which gives you a glimpse of conditions in a city not far from Boston.

Fifty typical families, formerly self-supporting and even well-to-do, were studied, and these facts concerning them were found:

"In only twenty-six was any one employed, and often this was only for two or three days a week. In only three of the families was there a weekly income of $25 to $30. Most of the other forty-seven were scraping along on from $5 to $15 a week.

"When unemployment came the rent and insurance were the first obligations to lapse. Thirty-two families owed sixteen months' rent.

"The most common debt is to the neighborhood grocer, who gossips to his other patrons about the condition of the family. Some families prefer to starve rather than risk the insults and indignities encountered at such stores.

"One mother told the investigator, 'I used to sit and wonder if the people next door would send some food in after they had finished. Sometimes they would, and at other times they would have nothing left, and we just wouldn't eat. I'd tell the kids to drink lots of water and we'd wait for the next meal.'"

When millions of Americans lack food to eat it gives other millions of Americans food for thought.

A good many thousands of dollars will be spent in speakeasies tonight by the prosperous and carefree for drinks at a dollar apiece, or more.

If you happen to be one of those individuals, put aside the price of a few drinks and send it to some charity.

Water won't hurt you, for a change, and the money will buy food for some American boy or girl who can't live on water indefinitely.

Shingles for 'Sophs'

The choice of a dean of women for the University of Oklahoma is vexing Governor "Alfalfa Bill" Murray. The letter of the one outstanding applicant, Dr. Mary Tatman, has been divulged publicly. The lady is a firm-willed person. She has small use for psychological theories.

"Give them the shingle," she demands. Meaning not the shingle bob, but the old-time woodshed bastinado. She is for thwacking the pupils good and hard, like Dickens' Squeers. Also she is for compelling their return to old-fashioned nightgowns. The wearing of pajamas she holds as wicked, and condemns "anywhere and everywhere."

It is to be doubted the lady would be brilliantly successful as a dean. Nor would the Governor be so unchivalrous as to appoint her.

From the Victorian viewpoint it might be all right, but politically, it would be a blunder. The thousand sophomores thwacked by the Tatman shingle will vote in a year or two. We just warn the Governor, that's all.

Listen, World! :: A Letter

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Are Ladies Like This?

IT WAS a letter from a young wife, about husbands. Her husband in particular.

Elsie Robinson

She said that American mothers train their boys to be good ——

And successful businessmen—

BUT THEY DO NOT TRAIN THEIR BOYS TO BE HUSBANDS.

We snickered. Printed it. Waited for the explosion. Here it is:

Dear Miss Robinson:

What's this big ado about "boys being raised to be husbands"? Isn't a man doing enough when he brings home the bacon as a doctor, lawyer, hod-carrier or what not, without also expecting him to do the household chores as well? Yet, that is exactly what is expected of the average husband. Here's what the usual American does before he goes to his office:

Get up at 6:30. Put on the coffee to percolate. Shave while doing so. Rush down the street for rolls and morning paper. Race upstairs again. Set the table. Heat the baby's milk. Pick up yesterday's discarded socks, underwear or what-have-you and put them neatly into the laundry bag. Pay the iceman. Fry the eggs and prepare the toast. Then awaken the Beloved Wife with a cheery kiss. Assist her into the breakfast room. Tie the bib around the baby's neck and stuff the oatmeal down his protesting throat while "mama" reads the paper. Clear the table. Put the dishes in the sink. Then, at last, throw on your coat and hat, remembering to be a dutiful husband and kiss the wife "bye-bye" with an affectionate hug, promising to be home at six and phone during the lunch hour. Baloney!

That's the truth. And yet you have the nerve to add—Sister has been instructed in the duties of wife and mother. Where? Not in this town. I'll give you the dope on this "sister" business.

At 14 the graduates from grammar school. At fourteen she hasn't learned anything about domestics except to listen to papa and mama fight, pester everyons in the house for movie money, stick her tongue out at brother, spy on big sister and her boy friend, and otherwise make a general nuisance of herself.

Then she goes to high school or business school where she continues to learn nothing. Gets mooney about John Gilbert or the boy next door. As for housework—she screams, "I've gotta do my homework," or else hides, 19 anyone suggests that she run to the store or dust the living room. At 16 she begins going to parties with Big Sister—and from that moment she's out gunning for a husband.

And then, some morning some young sap wakes up and finds himself married to "a wife"—a wife who can't even sew on a button, much less cook a meal or run a house. Then, if he dares to complain because the house is upset, or she has run him head over heels into debt, she bursts into tears, runs home to mama, and the whole family lands on his neck for his "brutality." Result: divorce.

Or suppose he endures it. Then what happens to him. She sleeps until eleven—spends the rest of her morning phoning her girl friends—spends her afternoon going to movies, beauty shops, window gadding, hotel lolling. At 6 p. m. the young husband, after being on the fighting line all day, arrives home, exhausted, to eat a delicatessen supper and meet a fresh, charming, vivacious wife who is all ready for a large evening's entertainment. If he's too fagged to take her—more tears, reproaches. "She might as well be dead as live like this."

Maybe you won't dare to print this. But it's the truth, and you know it.

H. Christian Berthelsen.

Is it? I wonder. ARE LADIES REALLY LIKE THIS? What's YOUR answer to H. Christian?

You have been to the Aquarium, of course?

Did you see the parasite crab, a big female that carries her little husband under one of her front flippers? No?

Then, did you see one of the larger fishes with a little parasite fish hanging to it feeding on the bodily juices of the big fish? Yes?

Well, here you see another kind of parasite living on the bodily juices of another big fish and a poor fish, namely, this worried old Earth.

Opper, for obvious reasons, makes the drawing a little out of scale. Saturn with its rings is not so close to the earth. And there is no five-pointed blazing star, half a mile from our surface.

But the TRUTH IS in this picture. Old Earth is carrying a load that should be dropped. Only a poor fish would endure it.

New York Day by Day

A Modern Pepys

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 6—Diary of a modern Pepys: Lay late and came the Courtney Ryley Coopers, back from Florida, and we talked about Care Brandt, Bob Davis, Karl Harriman and the astonishingly grisly vice exposures in the city. And I served some tasty marinated herring sent by S. Ernest in Detroit.

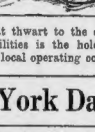
So to say farewell to R. M. Brinkerhoff against his sea voyage around the globe, the lucky fellow, and on to Lucy Virginia Long's and she distraught over house robbers carrying away her sables, chinchilla and wrist watch, only partly insured.



In the evening to see Gene Crawley's new home, the living room suggesting the Grand Central rotunda, and to the theater, driving Lisle Bell and his wife home. Thence afoot to my quarters and somehow befogged by the greatest depression I have ever known.

Ziegfeld has apparently abandoned his seasonal burst of splendor known as the Follies. Glorified movie houses presenting beautiful scenes melting into dazzling ladies have so plagiarized Ziggy's revue idea that he is hatchin, something entirely new.

Personal nomination for the most satisfying screen comedienne—Marie Dressler, the lady who came back.

In tenement districts a stranger expects to run across leering gutter gamins who make faces, hurl stones and scuttle into dark hallways. Once that was true. But not any more. Some of the most polite children will be found in such areas—better mannered indeed than those Rollos chaperoned by imported governesses in the Central Park Mall.

From a slum shaver in a brooding hallway Ted Cook and I recently asked a direction. He told us, bowed politely but bestowed a deserved rebuke when I offered a small coin for his trilling service. "Thank you," he said, "but I do not accept money from strangers."

A hiccuping drunk stumbled into the foyer of Roxy's the other morning as the caparisoned and caped ushers were assembling to fall in line for the day. The stew clapped his hands together several times and mumbled: "Go ahead, boys, and march!" And after a moment, to no one in particular, muttered: "I just dearly love drilling."

* * *

The disaster to the World is history. Many old employes were absorbed in the merger but a number found themselves jobless in a period of economic distress, talked to at least a half dozen who were jobless themselves but they were more concerned with landing something for the old timers. Newspapermen like to give the impression of being hard-boiled—the outward show of fussiness and a sort of Shavian contentiousness. Yet it is mostly bluff. Crack the superficial veneer and they're as soft as putty. Take them to a tear-jerking play and will they blubber!

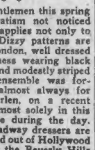
Clothes for gentlemen this spring show a conservatism not noticed for years. This applies not only to cut but color. Dizzy patterns are taboo. As in London, well dressed men go to business wearing black coats and vests and modestly striped trousers. This ensemble was formerly reserved almost always for tea. Michael Arlen, on a recent trip, appeared almost solely in this semi-formal attire during the day. Even flashy Broadway dressers are toning down. And out of Hollywood comes news that the Beverly Hills dude, Gens Markey, has gone suddenly sartorially somber. His cravats, his hosiery, his shirtings and suitings have attained attenuations that almost suggest mourning. A bright blade rusted!



En passant, the most perfectly groomed man I have seen for quite a spell is Clive Brooks, English actor. He seemed casually dressed but maybe he was going places. I didn't inquire.

From Mrs. C., Baltimore: "A movie magazine writer speaks of seeing you in the Montmartre in Hollywood. You dancing! What a laugh!"

The Marry-Go-Round - By Helen Rowland

Man's Trusting Heart

The world is full of Andy Browns—as far as women are concerned.

"Rose-petals-Andy," who never waited to get untangled from one woman before getting all wound up with another; who never saw the net until he had both feet in it, and who believed everything a woman TOLD him.

It is amazing what a woman can make a man believe—if he happens to want to believe it. No matter how many times he has been fooled, he is always ripe for the next woman. In fact, the worse he has been stung, the softer and more pliable he is in the hands of any other woman who will sympathize with him and soothe his wounded vanity.

* * *

No matter what his mirror tells him, any little, limpid-eyed thing with a lisp and a honeyed line can convince him that his bald spot is invisible, and that the Prince Charming of her visions is a portly gentleman with a triple chin and a touch of asthma.

Any woman can make a man feel sorry for himself—even when he doesn't know why. Because feeling "abused" is a man's pet luxury. Any woman can persuade a man that he looks like Lord Byron in a soft collar, like Gene Tunney in a bathing suit, like Lewis Stone in evening clothes or like Bobby Jones in white plus-fours. Even when he looks more like Mr. Jiggs or Barney Google.

And, as for making a man believe that you are in LOVE with him, that is just confirming his secret conviction! It's perfectly natural, isn't it? Well, then, how can he doubt that a woman loves him—when she TELLS him so!

* * *

Oh, yes, every man has a trusting heart where women are concerned. That's why so many of them, like Andy Brown, rush right out of one woman's clutches into another woman's arms.

New Colossal Statue of the Saviour

It Will Be Erected to Commemorate the Treaty Between the Vatican and Mussolini

THE "SACRED HEART" TO BE ERECTED NEAR MILAN

On Mount Calvario, a beautiful site formed by two branches of Venetian Alps, sixty-five miles from Milan, this gigantic statue will be unveiled next month.

It is at present being transported from Milan, where it was made by the Italian sculptor, Signor Timo Bortolotti. Moving the statue is a difficult task because of the statue's great weight and size.

The small boy standing on the scaffold just back of the shoulder and those standing on the ladder to the left emphasize the height of the statue.

The head and hands are of bronze, the rest of the figure of copper and, humanly speaking, it will last forever.

Those looking up the Camonica Valley will see it in the distance, giving the appearance of a giant cross, because of the outstretched arms.

The unveiling will be attended by the King of Italy, many great dignitaries from the Vatican representing the Pope, and perhaps by Mussolini himself.

Very important in the history of Italy and that of the Catholic Church is the event that erection of this statue is intended to celebrate, the signing of the Lateran Treaty between the Vatican and the Government of Italy two years ago, bringing into harmony the Italian State and Church and ending the long voluntary imprisonment of the Popes within the limits of the Vatican.

The great size of the statue is made desirable, as it is planned for visibility at a great distance from the height on which it stands. Big crowds will attend the unveiling.

Mere size in itself powerfully affects the human imagination. For that reason the gigantic "Colossus of Rhodes," a statue of bronze alleged by fiction of the Middle Ages to be so big that ships could sail between its outstretched feet, one standing on either side of the harbor, has always been included among the Seven Wonders of the World.

That Colossus, representing the Sun God, was one hundred and five feet high.

An earthquake destroyed it more than two thousand one hundred years ago, and it lay a mass of broken bronze for eight hundred years after the earthquake.

Then a Jewish dealer in old metal bought it and carted it away on nine hundred camels, which, perhaps, disillusioned the alleged "Sun God" worshipers, if any were left.

The power of a statue, of course, does not depend on size, unless, as in this case, visibility at a distance is desired.

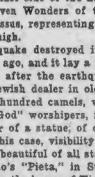
The Color of 'Her' Eyes

By WINIFRED BLACK

Are You Certain You Know It?

CAN BROWN-EYED parents have children with eyes of blue? And can blue-eyed parents have black-eyed children?



Winifred Black

Doctor H. H. Newman, of the University of Chicago, says no.

Don't be alarmed.

Don't disown your children and have strange and mysterious thoughts about your wife and her family.

Doctor Newman is just talking science.

This is the story behind Doctor Newman's most peculiar statement:

A rich man died in Chicago and left a big fortune. A certain young man comes forward and alleges that he is the son of the rich man and he wants some of the rich man's money.

The case has gone into court, and the lawyers have had a glorious time bringing in the Mendelian law of heredity.

This law is supposed to tell the innocent bystander all about who's who in paternity.

Since Doctor Newman said no, to the strange question asked him by the judge, Chicago has been in a ferment of excitement and the judge has been besieged by emotional men and indignant women.

The good Doctor Newman has risen to explain that he only said no in a Pickwickian sense—in other words, when he said no, he didn't mean "no, indeed," but just "no," scientifically speaking.

"Parents with genetically blue eyes, meaning eyes without brown pigment, could not have brown-eyed children, says Doctor Newman.

"If the stock is pure for one characteristic all offspring must have that characteristic."

And, said Doctor Newman, "I do not know of anybody who really has real blue eyes."

No one can judge eye color without instruments.

And there you are.

Are you a scientist, I ask you, and if you are not, how do you dare to pretend to even suspect the color of your own dear Arabella's eyes?

Sometimes, I almost wish there were no such things as scientists. They make you feel so sort of—uncertain—don't they?
